The proposal for the increase in the wind farm is hard to support when those whose lives are impacted by it receive no compensation or reduced rates on their energy bills.

The current wind farm is ok however the thought of the height of the new ones makes me consider leaving the area. It will impact the value of housing and tourism. Bournemouth successfully objected.

If the wind farm has to increase in size (I'm not convinced) then the wind turbines should be the same height as the existing. If not we will have a mess of industrialisation inshore.

Why do we have to take the impact of the blight of these turbines when other areas do not?
