

Whilst I have previously submitted comments that this scheme should not go ahead, I am very concerned about the dangerous BESS scheme which has been sneaked in by the applicants. Whilst using the sun to provide power is a good idea, putting lives at supreme risk is not! The Minister should not be imposing such schemes on the countryside. There are many opportunities to use business rooftops to the same end and, in any case, why does the energy need to be stored around the place. Surely, it could go straight to the National Grid.
