To whom it may concern

Manx National Heritage ('MNH') is the operating name of the Manx Museum and National Trust, constituted under act of Tynwald (the Manx Museum and National Trust Act 1959 as amended) and responsible for the statutory protection and promotion of the cultural heritage of the Isle of Man.

We note that the proposed Morgan Offshore Wind Farm Generation Assets development lies outside of Isle of Man territorial waters, and as such we have no statutory involvement in how the development is undertaken in respect of its potential impact upon cultural heritage.

We acknowledge that environmental survey and assessment for the Morgan development has used publicly-available data made available through our resources, specifically the Isle of Man Historic Environment Record. This provides terrestrial monument information from the Isle of Man and historical wreck data from both within and beyond Isle of Man territorial waters, and we note that these data have been incorporated in the appropriate sections of the Environmental Statement documentation.

We further note that it is intended that the development will follow industry-standard procedures contained within the document Archaeological Written Schemes of Investigation for Offshore Wind Farm Projects published by the Crown Estate (2021), and that an Outline Offshore WSI and a Protocol for Archaeological Discoveries (PAD) (Document Number: MRCNS-J3303-RPS-10114 Document Reference: J14) have been submitted.

In the light of the foregoing we have no statutory requirement to submit further comment, and are not opposed to the Morgan Offshore Wind Farm Generation Assets development.
