

In relation to the applicants drive through film for the proposed construction route the roads are clearly not suitable for heavy traffic.

I drive most of this route four times a week & although the roads look ok on the film they are narrower than you think. This is because the edges of the road have broken away over the years with farm traffic. If anything larger than a box van is coming towards you, you virtually have to stop to pass or else you will badly damage your wheels., or worse. How will construction traffic cope? It's manageable now as the roads are relatively quiet but once they get busy you will struggle to get anywhere & the roads will get destroyed.
