

Solar panels only work when the sun is shining so do not give continuity of energy. When the sun is shining in summer the amount of energy from all UK solar panels is too great for the grid to cope with so it is counter-productive. There is a greater need for land to be used to produce food/maintain biodiversity.