

East Park Energy is misconceived and needs to be stopped now, before any more taxpayers' money is wasted on it. Now that food security is recognised as a national security issue - and given that solar power generation in this country is too unreliable and inefficient to be relevant to major new demands such as AI data centres - the idea of turning vast tracts of good farmland over to solar is simply outdated.

Time to knock this on the head, for our and future generations' sakes.