

Yet another submission deadline, I have lost count, its totally wearing.

The cost to health will be huge. But we are being ignored.

Food should be grown in fields by farmers for the nation. Solar panels should be placed on roofs by engineers, and not called farms.

I witness on a daily basis the dangerous A631 road from Bawtry to Gainsborough, that passes from South Yorkshire, through North Notts to Lincolnshire. The accident figures seem to be inaccurate as there have been 5 serious accidents this year and a fatality. It had been stated that there were not any. However, this road is regularly closed due to flooding, accident, traffic volume or animal blockage. After all, this is a country road leading to the East Coast, with many house drives entering onto the A631. It currently struggles with the increasing traffic and is at the mercy of 2 bridges and dry weather. The works traffic, construction materials, engineers and lorries will need this route. The outcome is unimaginable. Lets put these solar panels on industrial roofs in towns with good access. And maybe some sunshine might produce a small amount of electricity when it is needed, hopefully? Realism is required above box ticking and target reaching.
