

I am concerned that if the project goes ahead the conveniently vague invention of "grey belt" will come into play. It will be so easy to infill the patchwork of land within the project (and adjoining projects) with structures that would never be otherwise suitable for farmland. In the unlikely event of the solar factories actually being properly decommissioned half a century hence these "grey belt" developments will still remain.