

The applicant has been casual in its approach to providing information which makes a mockery of the planning process. Information requested has not been provided and schedules not followed. This is indicative of a cavalier approach and on this ground alone the application should be refused.

The other issues of proper exploration of visual impact and archaeological investigation have clearly also not been fulfilled.