

According to Ed Miliband, “there has to be a proper process that we follow” and “each [solar development] project [should be] decided on merit.” PVDP has made a mockery of the planning system by ignoring or failing to respond in a timely manner to the Examiners’ questions and requirements. The proper process can’t be taken through to a decision when so much evidence is still missing. I urge the Examiners not to recommend the application be accepted, given that so much evidence is missing.
