I live in Botley and feel strongly that the application for the installation of the Botley West solar panels should be refused.

The scale of the proposed installation is disproportionately large and would involve the loss of good quality agricultural land. It is also proposed to be sited within the setting of Blenheim Palace, which is an importance cultural amenity, and the relatively close location location of Oxford Airport is another undesirable feature. While I consider that the use of solar energy is a desirable concept, I feel that solar panels should primarily be installed on the roofs of buildings and not blight agricultural land.
