Sirs,

I write to express my continued opposition to PVDPs plans for Botley West Solar.

I reiterate my previous concerns that the development is simply too big. On top of this we now have a situation where PVDP have still not answered the questions they were asked months ago. This seems unprofessional to me and I might say somewhat arrogant that they can go ahead without a full and thorough study to get a positive planning result.

The most glaring omission seems to be the lack of planning around the siting and date for go live of the sub-station. Surely they should ensure they have planning permission for the substation and also a promised date of link up to the National Grid before the PVDP proposal goes ahead.

Yours faithfully,

Andrew Gower
