

This and other solar projects in Lincolnshire are a take over of the country side. They are reducing the county's and country's ability to feed itself, making us reliant on controlled and expensive imports that we have no control of regarding chemicals being used.

The compulsory purchase of the land also means that the likelihood of the ground being returned to agriculture after the 40 years is negligible. The impact on the environment of the relatively short life of the solar panels and supporting equipment is not environmentally friendly at all. All the proposed solar farms for Lincolnshire are morally wrong. Leave the countryside to be countryside and let crops be grown. This is a short term violation of nature and farming and the impact long term is catastrophic. Utilise roofs, waste sites. Leave the countryside alone. Look long term of the impact.

Lincolnshire is a food growing county, it is criminal to take this away. And what is the advantage to locals from the electricity being produced so close to their villages. NOTHING! We benefit in no way!! STOP THIS [REDACTED] OF THE COUNTRYSIDE. Remember decision makers, this will be something you have to face yourself and have to answer for when you pass over. There is a price you will have to pay!! Wake up and protect our countryside.
