

Is the solar farm necessary given that this area comes under the South Midlands umbrella and the target for solar farms in this region has already been reached?

We are still suffering from daily disruptions caused by HS2 road closures, diverted heavy traffic passing through rural communities and churning up the roads. More chaos caused by the additional traffic needed to install the panels and battery storage systems on the sites is not needed.

BESS is not proving to be safe and given the distance from major fire services (apart from the small outpost in Winslow), any fire would cause a major incident causing massive damage and disruption.

I still cannot understand why solar panels are not being installed directly where they are needed, on factories, stores, distribution facilities, etc and homes rather than using up prime agricultural land.
