I am writing to register my objection to the proposed solar farm.

It will have a huge adverse impact on the beautiful scenery of the Claydons, which once lost will be gone forever.

It is inconceivable that this ugly monstrosity is even being contemplated in an area adjacent to and among medieval woodlands and land with beautiful views over the Vale of Aylesbury towards the Chilterns.

There are much less environmentally damaging sites that could be used. For example besides motorways and railway lines where no one would want to live anyway because of preexisting noise pollution.

Whatever the financial benefits of this proposal are to the Verneys, there are more important considerations involved here. Do we really want to leave this desecration of the landscape as a reminder to our descendants of how indifferent we were to bespoiling beautiful countryside, which as I have already said, once lost will be gone forever?

[REDACTED] should be ashamed of themselves, as stewards of this land to even countenance such a proposal.
