

Hello all.

I live at [REDACTED]. I would be happy to invite you to come and see the view from my home, because, I feel it has to be seen for itself.

My property backs onto farming fields where the applicant (Rosefield) proposes to construct a solar farm. In their defence, the updated plans and proposals do show a slight scaling back, and, although much appreciated, does not really address the issue of using this type of countryside for a relatively huge project which visually and naturally does not connect with the scenery. There is no way around this, the terrific views we have from our home will be absolutely spoilt, not only in the breathtakingly spring and summer, but also all year round, when autumn woodland colours and winter snow form an amazing view. Needless to say, the countryside walks won't ever be the same.

I just want to add that the construction phase will be an eyesore, and I doubt that any amount of mitigation will be able to change that. This will totally transform the peaceful nature of a typical village and surroundings which people come to for that very reason!

Thank you for your time.
