

I find the lack of assessment to the impact on the environment, most notably the impact on both a noted site of ancient woodland and a local wildlife site (Carlton Wood) to be sufficiently lacking. The response from the Forestry Commission and Natural England is clearly only from an initial enquiry and is standard advice to a planning application. Further reviews and ecological assessment should take place before anything is confirmed or decided.