

Lime Down Solar Park will have a devastating impact on tourism and hospitality business's. It's location is badly thought out and will impact business's like ours. We have a bed and breakfast located in an area of outstanding beauty. We also offer ceramic and art courses. Clients come for the tranquility that the area offers so they can recover from their stressful lives, watch the local wildlife out of the windows and the dairy herds in the fields. Our bed and breakfast is one side of the road, on the other will be a solar park with its constant humming 24 hours a day, glare from the panels themselves, the unsightly panels, the construction and its traffic will be a total turn off for any Clients who come to enjoy the area. Cyclists who stay to tour the area will not want to come from the industrial city's and towns to the industrialised countryside of a sea of solar panels and the noise they create. The financial impact will be huge, as this will have a 'knock on effect' a decline in tourists to the area, loss of income to those who have business's in the area of tourism. If Lime Down Solar Park goes ahead it will mean the devastation of tourism, loss of jobs and ultimately loss of taxes this government needs.
