

This project is in the wrong place, using high quality farmland to desecrate the outstanding natural environment of South Norfolk. The way it is spread across the land, because of the topography, actually means its impact on wellbeing, nature, rural health and work, is spread far wider than it would be if it were, say, concentrated in an empty fenland area. In terms of local impact it will have a terrible impact on the heritage, natural environment, wellbeing and health of Brooke and its people.
