

I have commented previously on this project from the personal point of view of where we live. The roads around us will be hugely impacted by the proposed project, affecting the already large amount of local traffic and potentially damaging our pre-roman hedges. We run a hospitality business that relies on the peaceful nature of our surroundings, and this, as well as the value of our property will I believe be severley compromised. However, in addition to this view, having listened to the people talking at the open floor hearings, I am moved to write again. It became so clear that just one company stands to gain hugely at the expense of so many people's livelihoods and well being, and I don't understand how that can be possible or fair. This is not a case of nimbyism, this is about heartbroken people whose lives have been put on hold as they stand to lose everything they have worked for over many years. There is one foreign investment company that stands to gain hugely from our government, as opposed to hundreds of people who will be negatively affected, not to mention the destruction of half a county.
