

The East Pye Solar proposal is going to be a huge eyesore on beautiful agricultural land. A similar site nearby on the A140 has already had smaller solar panels over approx 200 acres. The beautiful green has been lost and replaced with a garish reflective grey. This proposal is substantially bigger. Many of the fields are currently harvesting healthy potatoes as well as other food for the country and as such are clearly full of nutrients that will die off with the installation of large PVs. The construction of the PVs will be a huge disruption to wildlife, killing off habitats, not to mention chemicals leaching off the panels over time. I am a keen believer in sustainable energy, however east pye solar is a detriment to the local area and communities. These solar panels should be installed over car parks and urban environments, not in the countryside.
