

I would not like the hover port to be changed into sealink because I live in Ramsgate. I walk my dog in and around the hover port. I know how important it is for the environment. As a lecturer at the university of Kent I have heard from many students and colleagues there who also are opposed to destroying the fragile ecosystem and wildlife habitat that is directly around the area. It is unthinkable that this is even a possibility up for discussion. It will do incalculable harm to the environment and local wildlife. It is absolutely disgraceful that local people would be completely ignored in the interests of corporate greed. If this is a democracy then such catastrophic and undesired development should not happen. I would say the people seeking this should be ashamed but they are clearly devoid of any intellectual or emotional response based on ethical or moral considerations. I oppose this infrastructure.
