

No wildlife surveys have been undertaken, the use of the hover port use wasn't transparent. The loss of this space will be tragic to both local people and the wildlife. I took my Grandmother there for years until her passing at 96. One of the few places I could take her in a wheelchair to get near to the water and be so close to wildlife. There are other more suitable areas that will create far less devastation. This has to be rejected and a more considered and transparent plan developed in an area that won't create such a negative impact but may cost you a little more money.