

The change of use application for the old Hoverport is just another example of the way this process is being steamrollered through by National Grid, their whole approach to this proposal is totally flawed, with no meaningful impact assessments carried out, and clearly no concern for either the community that lives and uses the land for pleasure and leisure, or the wildlife that has reclaimed this plot from decaying concrete wasteland, and turned it into a thriving habitat, both flora and fauna have earned the right to remain unchallenged in this unique area of Pegwell Bay and the salt marshes. Leave the Hoverport alone.
