

Thanet and the whole of the UK is a very nature deprived area the old hover port has evolved since being closed it is now a wonderful area of nature many many rare, endangered and disappearing species of all nature. The area has reclaimed its wildlife habitats. It is an area of great peace, serenity a wonderful place for its inhabitants, migrating birds and humans. It is a precious place, it should not be used and ruined forever. The nature can not be replaced it will not recover as we have seen with previous NG plans that have not gone well and severely damaged Pegwell bay destroying part of it and not repairing the damage. This is a place we as a family visit at weekly for a walk along the old hover port site having a cuppa at the cafe on the green, many many people use this area for recreational healthy use, to have peace and tranquility, a breathing space from busy life's to see nature at its best. Education our children, grandchildren to all that nature has to offer there and to the rare a disappearing species. If NG get the go ahead to destroy and decimate the old hover port it would be sacrilege, the amount of traffic would be insurmountable, horrendous to peoples health. And way of life. The hover port has unknown depths and I do not believe it's structure strong enough for the heavy machine NG want there, moving around. They have as usual not done due diligence and researched the history the make up of the area, the impact it will cause for ever. They have not done enough investigating, they should also do these through the differing seasons as nature changes and impacts differently through out the seasons. NG seem to have looked at a map and thought ah there's a nice space we can use that ! That will do !!! Irrespective of the unimaginable devastation they will cause to the humans and nature that live there..... it's not green energy! it's green destruction! Green devastation ! Nature, Mental health destruction! It's deplorable...,it's irreversible!
