

The Old Hoverport is a beloved walk I take as often as possible. Back in 2024 I was very ill and unable to work. The one place that I found peace was at the hoverport nature reserve. At first I drove there in the harsh winter weather. But as the warmer spring weather came my bicycle became my mode of transport. The utter peace from doctors appointments or just modern day living calmed my nervous system. To sit and watch the tide going in or out and the see nature up and close, filled me with joy. It is truly a wonderful place. On a map it may look like an old disused lump of concrete. But to me now that nature has fully taken hold, it is a beautiful place to visit. It reminds me of day when I was a kid and we seem to have nature everywhere around us. Plenty of places to play. But now all those spaces are being filled with new homes. This is one of the last places in our area with natural beauty. Birds, insects, flowers and vegetation. Please leave this natural area which will only get better with time. Leave it to nature. Let it be part of our peace we all do greatly need in these fast past lives. The old Hoverport and it's mud flats it a true force of nature.
