Dear Secretary of State,

Whilst I appreciate the need for an upgrade in the distribution of electricity in East Anglia and the rest of the UK, I am very worried about the Sea Link and Lion Link projects here. The true cost of delivering electricity via Sea Link appears unclear and certainly much more than originally planned.

Before millions of pounds of consumer's money is committed, a cheaper and less damaging to the environment alternative such as upgrading pylons or an offshore alternative must be properly considered. Offshore grids in the Netherlands seem to work. Why not here?

Please consider these alternatives which will be cheaper and safer for the environment.

Yours faithfully,

Michelle Keane
