26. Essex Red Data List Species

Information contained in the Inventory

The Essex Red Data List was compiled in 2002 for English Nature (now Natural England), with the input of County Recorders and other county specialists and with an extensive period of consultation. The full list is available at www.essexfieldclub.org.uk/portal/p/Essex+Red+Data+List.

The list is an important compilation of Essex information, helping to inform and better enable biodiversity and planning decisions throughout the county. As an internet resource, the list has been updated, with changes listed on the website.

Inclusion of species on the list is guided by the following key criteria:

- In the national Red Data List (where one exists)
- Nationally Scarce/Notable (where there is an available definition and list).
- Species which are rare, declining and/or subject to a high degree of threat in Essex (and not in either of the above categories).

Depending on the degree of regional knowledge this is related to:

- Species recorded in few modern sites (X or fewer sites, since 19XX).
- Species with restricted distribution occurring in habitats under a high degree of threat nationally and/or within the county.
- More widespread species which have undergone a substantial decline in number or distribution since 19XX.
- Species which are extinct in Essex, and for which there is significant potential for re-establishment, either naturally or through intervention.

The values of X will vary for different taxonomic groups; County Recorders and other county specialists have used their knowledge to determine the threshold values for each particular taxonomic group in Essex.

In addition, Essex Red Data List Threat Statuses have been assigned to the Arachnida, aculeate Hymenoptera, Syrphidae, larger Brachycera, Orthoptera and Odonata taxonomic groups. These threat categories are defined* as:

Essex Endangered

- Species known as a single population within a single post-1980 1km² or only from threatened or vulnerable sites in Essex.
- Species believed extinct in Essex.

Essex Vulnerable

- Species known from only two populations in Essex.
- Essex Rare species which are restricted to habitats or sites known to be under threat in Essex.
- Species which only occur at sites in Essex known to be vulnerable.
- Species which have shown a continuous decline over the last twenty years and are now known to exist in less than 1% of the covered post-1980 1km² in Essex.

Essex Threatened

- Essex Scarce species with a Frequency Ratio of less than 1.5 and Tetrad percentage of less than 1.0 indicating widely isolated populations within the county.
- Essex Scarce species which are restricted to habitats or sites known to be under threat in the county.
- Species which have shown a continuous decline over the last twenty years.

Regionally Important

- Species which are important in a national context because Essex contains a significant proportion of the national populations.
- Species which are important in a national context because they have a close association with a specific nationally threatened habitat included in the Biodiversity Action Plan.
- Species which are important in a national context because they are dominant in or peculiar to a specific habitat for which Essex contains a large percentage of the national habitat.

Where a taxon not included in the list has been recorded from 6 or less of the 57 hectads (10km squares) covering the Watsonian VCs 18 and 19 it has been accorded a provisional Essex Red Data List status (pListed) here.

27. Invasive Species

Information about invasive species

Invasive species may threaten habitats and species with biodiversity and nature conservation value. Where invasive species are present, action may or may not be appropriate to control their spread or to eliminate them from sites and habitats.

Invasive Species Action Plans are used to help coordinate the response to key invasive non-native species across England, Scotland and Wales. The plans provide a short and strategic overview identifying the key aims, objectives and actions. They can be seen on the Defra website at <https://secure.fera.defra.gov.uk/nonnativespecies/index.cfm?sectionid=92>

Action on invasive species

The appropriate response to the presence of an invasive species will vary depending on the species and the degree to which it is or may in the future cause damage to the ecology at the location.

Identification of invasive species

Identification of invasive non-native species is an essential part of invasive species management and guidance can be found on the Defra website at <https://secure.fera.defra.gov.uk/nonnativespecies/index.cfm?sectionid=47>

Invasive species records

Most existing records of invasive species in Essex are made during general recording, although there are plans to encourage targetted recording of these species in the future.

Where you have records of invasive species for the search area, please submit them to us by email to datasearch@essexfieldclub.org.uk or via our website at www.essexfieldclub.org.uk

Where invasive species have been recorded, their records are summarised in the following table.

Geological Site Information

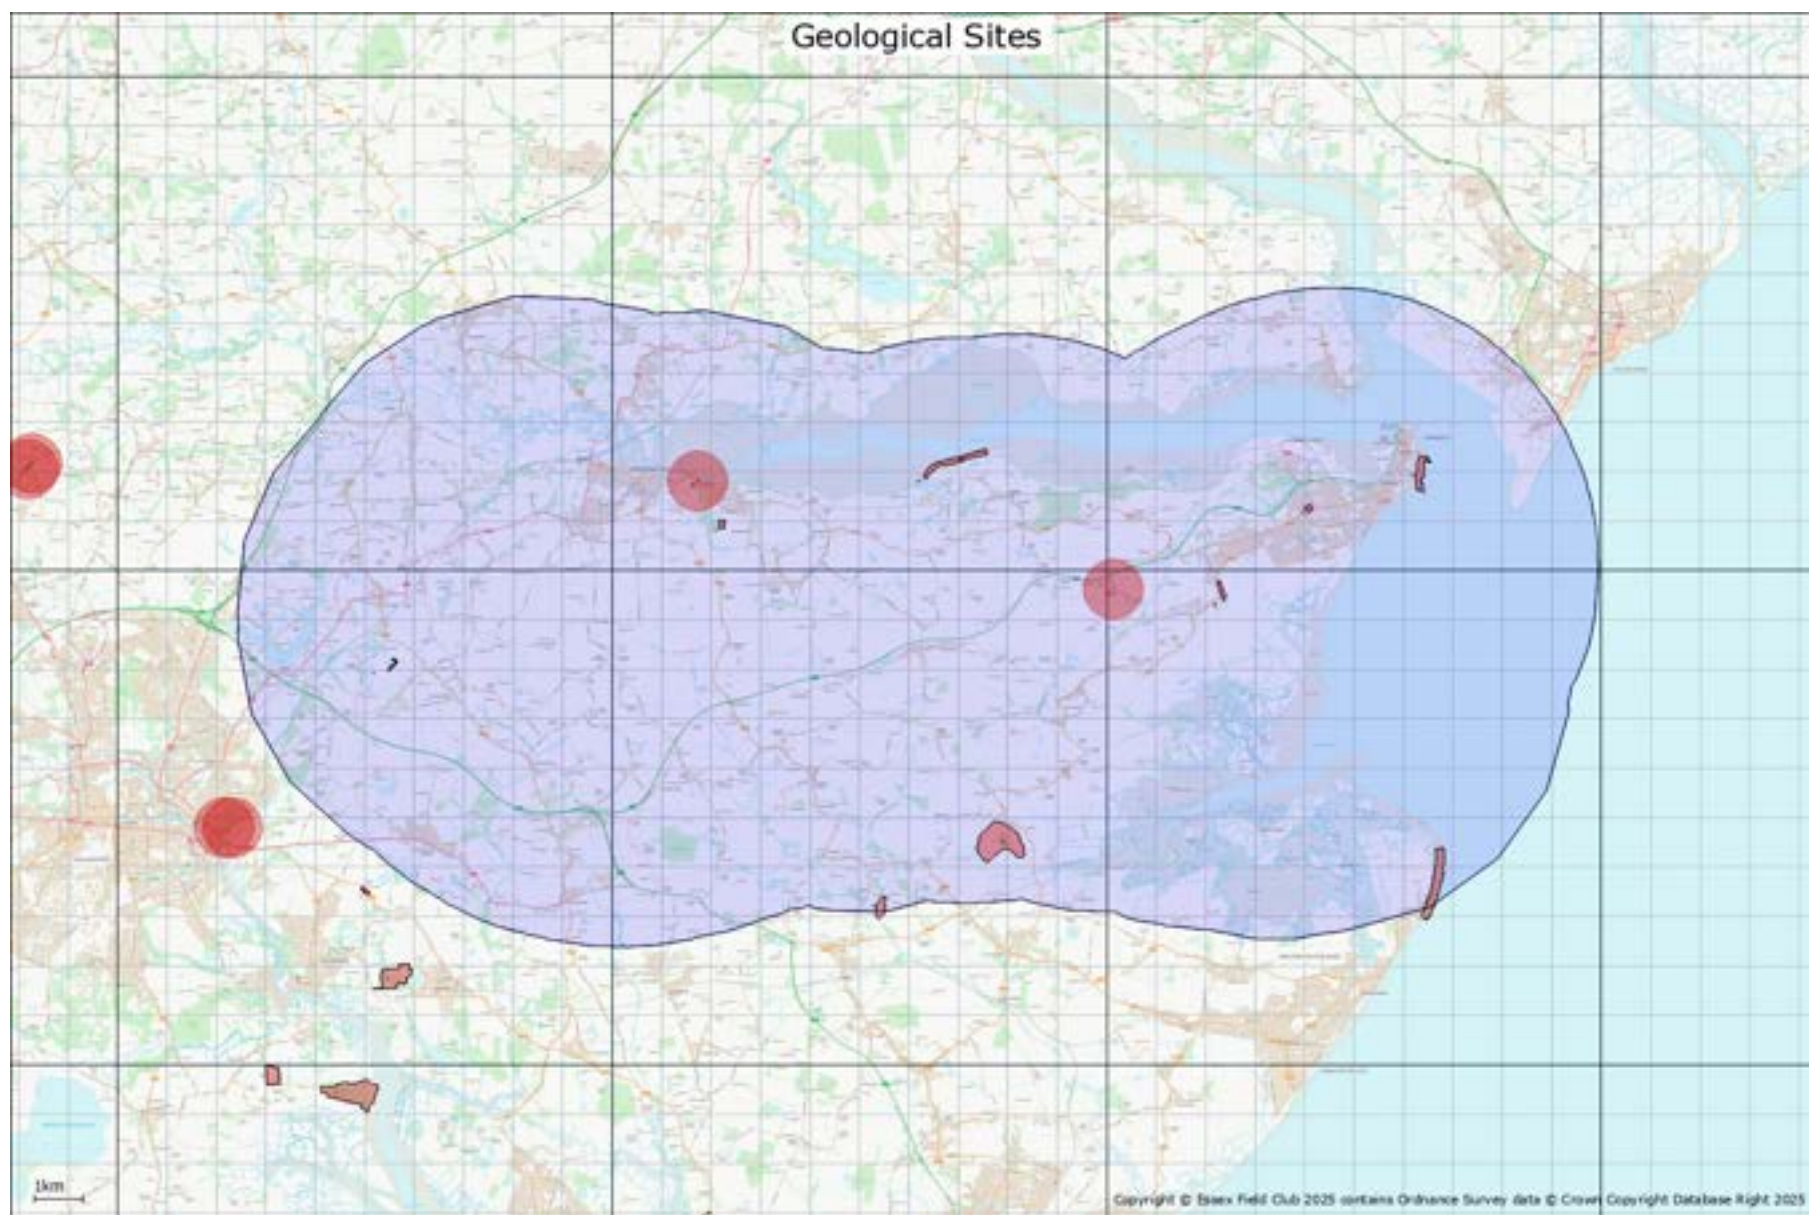

The geological site database includes and describes geological sites which are of regional or local importance for their scientific, historical and/or educational value unlike the strictly scientific criteria applied to the SSSIs (Sites of Special Scientific Interest) which are of national importance. These are not 'second tier' sites but sites of regional and local value in their own right.

Some of these sites are being designated as Local Geological Sites (LOGS), formerly called Regionally Important Geological Sites, or have the potential to be so designated, and these sites are marked as such. Existing SSSIs which have been designated for their geological importance are also included in this database.

Note: Some of the sites in the geological site database are solely of historical interest as a record of an important or interesting discovery. There are also sites which are not strictly geological but nevertheless have a geological connection, for example buildings constructed of local stone. These sites have not been included in this report.

Although many of the sites listed are publicly accessible, inclusion of a site in this database does not imply any rights of access. Permission to visit must always be obtained from the relevant landowner.

Geological Site Information

1. CoG3 Greenbank House Sarsen Stones, Notified Local Geological Site, TL98193208

Site name: Greenbank House Sarsen Stones

Grid reference: TL 9819 3208

Brief description of site:

Four sarsen stones are situated by the entrance to Greenbank House in Boxted Church Road near the junction with Holly Lane. Each is about 90 x 60 x 40 cm in size and they can be clearly seen from the roadside. The garden of the house contains over 20 sarsens, each one brought here by the owner from farmland in the nearby Stour Valley. Greenbank House is a private residence.

Details

Sarsens are extremely hard boulders of sandstone formed around 55 million years ago when the climate of Britain was hot and a layer of sand beneath the surface of the ground became cemented with quartz. They are thus very resistant to erosion and have survived the rigours of the Ice Age. They originated on the chalk downland north and west of Essex and were carried here by rivers and glaciers. After retreat of the ice they became concentrated in river valleys.

The formation of silcretes (which includes sarsens and puddingstones) has been the subject of recent scientific debate. Research has compared the conditions under which sarsens and puddingstones may have been formed with the present day climate in the Kalahari Desert and parts of Australia.

Notified:

2. CoG11 Ridgnalls puddingstone, Notified Local Geological Site, TL98263218

Site name: Ridgnalls Puddingstone

Grid reference: TL 9826 3218

Brief description of site:

A rare example of a puddingstone in this part of Essex. Probably local derived from gravel workings in the Kesgrave formation of the ancestral Thames river that once flowed across this area.

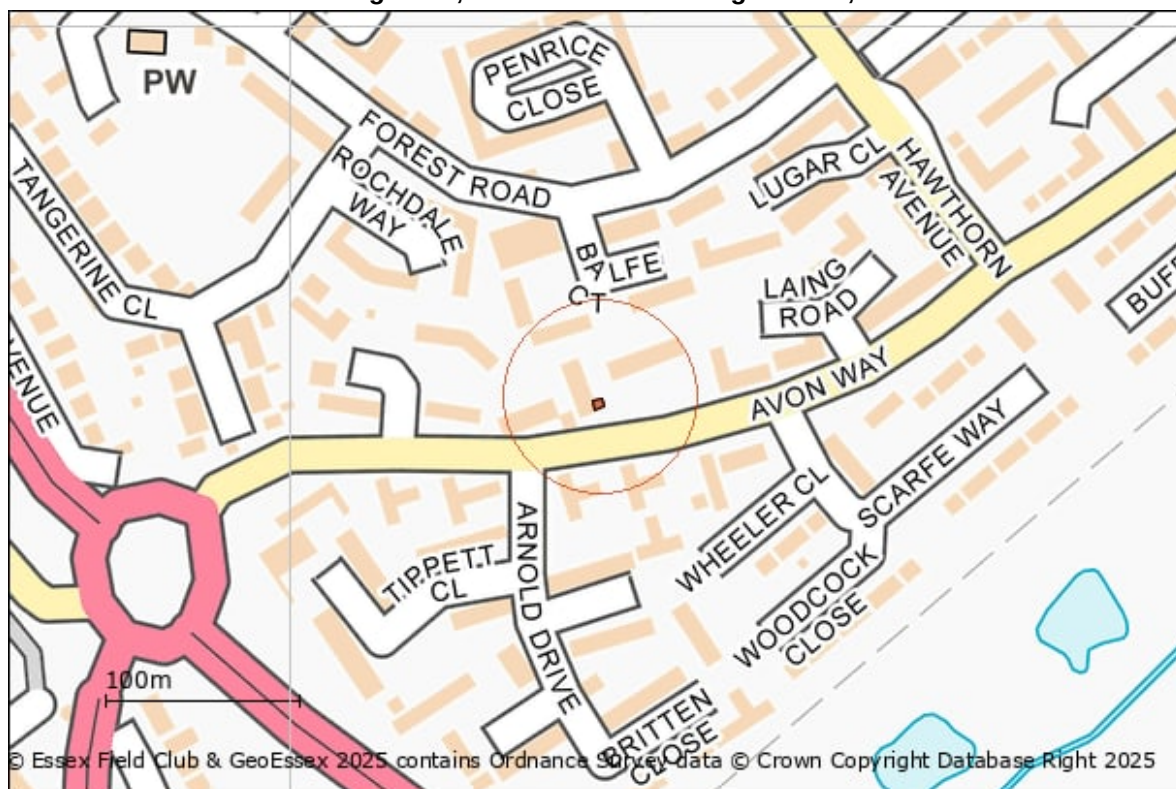

Details

Puddingstone was formed around 55 million years ago when the climate of Britain was hot and a layer of pebbles beneath the surface of the ground became cemented with quartz. They are thus very resistant to erosion and have survived the rigours of the Ice Age. They originated on the Hertfordshire Essex border, and were probably carried by the River Thames when it flowed north of its present course.

The formation of silcretes (which includes sarsens and puddingstones) has been the subject of recent scientific debate. Research has compared the conditions under which sarsens and puddingstones may have been formed with the present day climate in the Kalahari Desert and parts of Australia.

3. CoG4 Greenstead Puddingstone, Notified Local Geological Site, TM02162481

Site name: Greenstead Puddingstone

Grid reference: TM 0216 2481

Brief description of site:

A very fine, colourful boulder of Hertfordshire puddingstone, one of the best in Essex, sits on a concrete plinth in the communal garden of a block of flats in Avon Way, only a few metres from the pavement. It was formerly on full view but unfortunately it has now been enclosed within the communal garden and a hedge has grown up completely obscuring it from view.

Details

A very fine and colourful boulder of Hertfordshire puddingstone (1.5 x 0.75 metres in size) sits on a concrete plinth in a communal garden adjacent to 160 Avon Way. It was formerly clearly visible from the public thoroughfare between 160 Avon Way and Bennett Court. Unfortunately a hedge has now been planted in front of the boulder and it is now not visible from the footpath. It can, however, be seen by entering the communal garden. At the front of 160 Avon Way is a small sarsen stone on the grass - also on a concrete plinth.

This puddingstone is a puzzle as it is in mint condition and shows no sign of being transported by a river or an ice sheet. It was presumably found when the housing estate was constructed in the 1960s. The fact that it was placed on a plinth clearly means that it was valued at the time and it is therefore very sad that it is no longer visible.

This is not the only important boulder in Greenstead. About 150 metres to the east of the puddingstone a large sarsen stone sits next to a bus stop in Avon Way - see separate site entry (Greenstead Sarsen Stone - TM 0231 2483).

The origin of Hertfordshire puddingstone

Hertfordshire Puddingstone was formed around 55 million years ago when the climate of Britain was hot and a layer of pebbles beneath the surface of the ground became cemented with quartz. They are thus very resistant to erosion and have survived the rigours of the Ice Age. They originated in Hertfordshire, hence the name, and were probably carried to Essex by the River Thames when it flowed north of its present course. However, the distribution and abundance of Hertfordshire puddingstone in parts of Essex suggests that some occurrences may have a local Essex source.

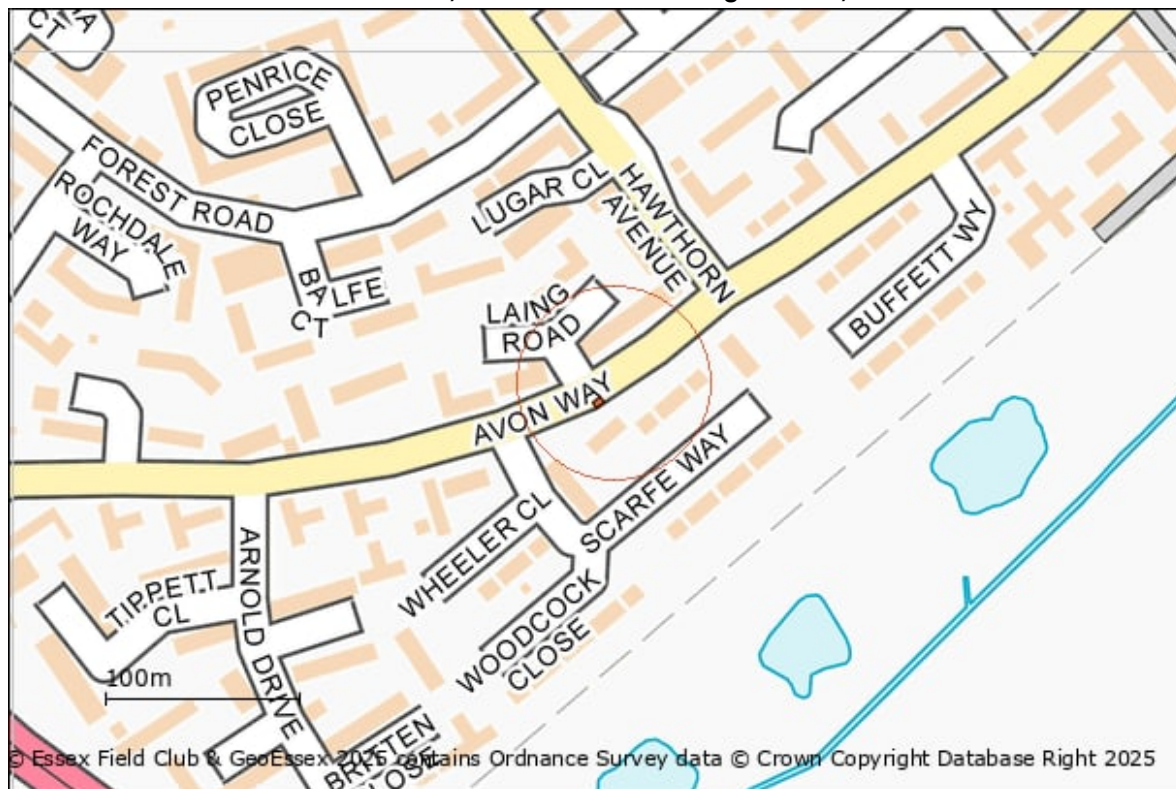

The formation of silcretes (which includes sarsens and puddingstones) has been the subject of recent scientific debate. Research has compared the conditions under which sarsens and puddingstones may have been formed with the present day climate in the Kalahari Desert and parts of Australia.

Notified:

The Greenstead puddingstone in its original setting. It has now been completely obscured.

4. CoG5 Greenstead Sarsen Stone, Notified Local Geological Site, TM02312483

Site name: Greenstead Sarsen Stone

Grid reference: TM 0231 2483

Brief description of site:

A sarsen stone stands by a bus stop in Avon Way. It is very unusual to see a sarsen stone in such an urban setting.

Details

A fine large fragment of a sarsen stone (0.9 x 0.9 metres in size) stands upright by a bus stop in Avon Way. It is the largest of several sarsen stones in the vicinity, presumably all found when the housing estate was constructed in the 1960s.

About 150 metres to the west of this stone is a boulder of Hertfordshire puddingstone - see separate site entry (Greenstead Puddingstone - TM 0216 2481).

5. CoG10 Priors Pit, Notified Local Geological Site, TM03001986

Site name: Priors Pit, Furneaux Lane, Fingringhoe.

Grid reference: TM 0300 1986

Brief description of site:

On the west edge of Priors Pit is a preserved cliff of glacial sand and gravel. A public footpath runs along the top of the cliff but permission to access the cliff face must be obtained from the landowner.

Summary of the geological interest:

On the west edge of Priors Pit is a preserved cliff of glacial sand and gravel. Priors Pit is a former sand and gravel pit which ceased working in about 2015. The pit has not been infilled and the cliff retained for the benefit of sand martins.

The cliff consists mostly of sand with occasional seams of flint gravel. This is thought to be the Upper St. Osyth Gravel which was also worked at the nearby gravel pit which is now Fingringhoe Wick Nature Reserve. This sand and gravel was deposited some 450,000 years ago by colossal torrents of meltwater issuing from the Anglian ice sheet, the edge of which was then situated only 12 kilometres west of here. At that time ice covered almost all of Britain. This cliff therefore provides evidence of an exceptionally cold period of the Ice Age.

Scientific interest and site importance

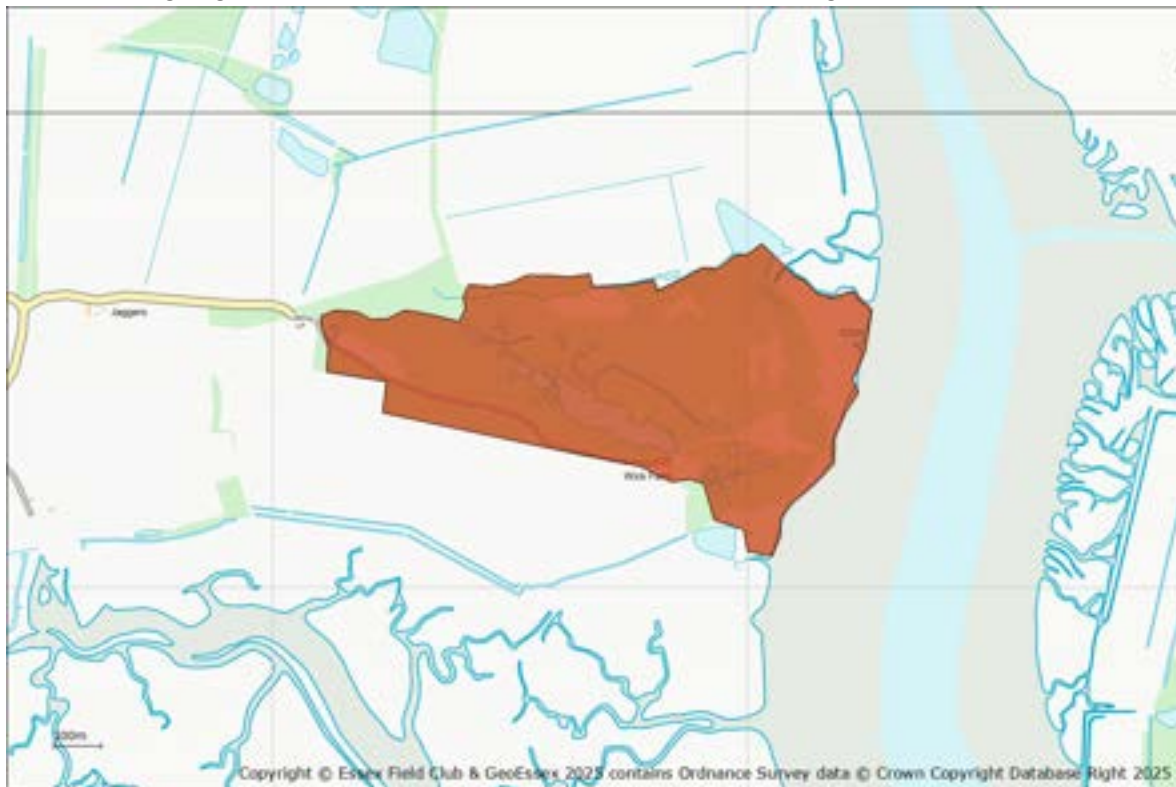

The Fingringhoe area is underlain by Lower St. Osyth Gravel and Upper St. Osyth Gravel (Bridgland 1994). The Lower St. Osyth Gravel was laid down by the River Thames when it flowed through central Essex, to the south of Colchester, and out across the low-lying land that is now the North Sea to become a tributary of the Rhine. Shortly afterwards the Anglian Ice Sheet blocked the valley of the Thames upstream and diverted the river to its present course. As the ice sheet spread into central Essex the former Thames valley became a channel for glacial meltwater which flowed across the Fingringhoe area laying down the Upper St. Osyth Gravel, a typical glacial outwash deposit. The junction between the two gravels therefore represents the point at which the Thames ceased to flow through central Essex. The Thames at that time was a very large, braided river and its diversion must have been a catastrophic event.

The sand and gravel exposed in this cliff is thought to be Upper St. Osyth Gravel. However, there is a distinct junction half way up the cliff which may be the junction between the Upper St. Osyth Gravel and the Lower St. Osyth Gravel. If this is so, the junction will represent the diversion of the Thames.

6. CoG2 Fingringhoe Wick Nature Reserve, Notified Local Geological Site, TM045195

Site name: Fingringhoe Wick Nature Reserve, Fingringhoe.

Grid reference: TM 045 195

Brief description of site:

Fingringhoe Wick Nature Reserve is a former gravel pit working glacial gravel. The gravel exposures are now overgrown but there are plenty of areas where pebbles and cobbles could be seen and examined. It is recommended that some of these areas (eg. to the north of the concrete gravel storage bunkers) could be cleared of the covering of moss to reveal a great variety of rock types that would tell a story of the geological history of the region. The site therefore retains its educational value.

Summary of the geological interest:

Fingringhoe Wick was a working gravel quarry, known as Freshwater Pit, between 1924 and 1959. Visible in many places are mounds and banks of glacial sand and gravel (known as Upper St. Osyth Gravel) which was deposited some 450,000 years ago by colossal torrents of meltwater issuing from the Anglian ice sheet, the edge of which was then situated only 12 kilometres west of here. At that time ice covered almost all of Britain to a maximum thickness of over one kilometre.

The gravel therefore provides evidence of an exceptionally cold period of the Ice Age, a time when Essex was barren of virtually all life - in stark contrast to the abundant flora and fauna that can be seen at Fingringhoe Wick today. Mounds of gravel still exist where pebbles of several different rock types can be collected. These rocks provide clues to the origin of the ice and the rocks over which the ice sheet passed.

There are fine views of the Colne estuary from the edge of the reserve.

Scientific interest and site importance

In the past Fingringhoe Wick has been cited as providing exposures of Lower St. Osyth Gravel and Upper St. Osyth Gravel (Bridgland 1994). The Lower St. Osyth Gravel was laid down by the River Thames when it flowed through central Essex, to the south of Colchester, and out across the low-lying land that is now the North Sea to become a tributary of the Rhine. Shortly afterwards the Anglian Ice Sheet blocked the valley of the Thames upstream and diverted the river to its present course. As the ice sheet spread into central Essex the former Thames valley became a channel for glacial meltwater which flowed across the Fingringhoe area laying down the Upper St. Osyth Gravel, a typical glacial outwash deposit. The junction between the two gravels therefore represents the point at which the Thames ceased to flow through central Essex. The Thames at that time was a very large, braided river and its diversion must have been a catastrophic event.

Fingringhoe Wick is important because there are very few other sites in Essex where pebbles and cobbles in the glacial gravel (in this case the Upper St. Osyth Gravel) can be readily examined, although all cliff exposures are now very overgrown.

Other information

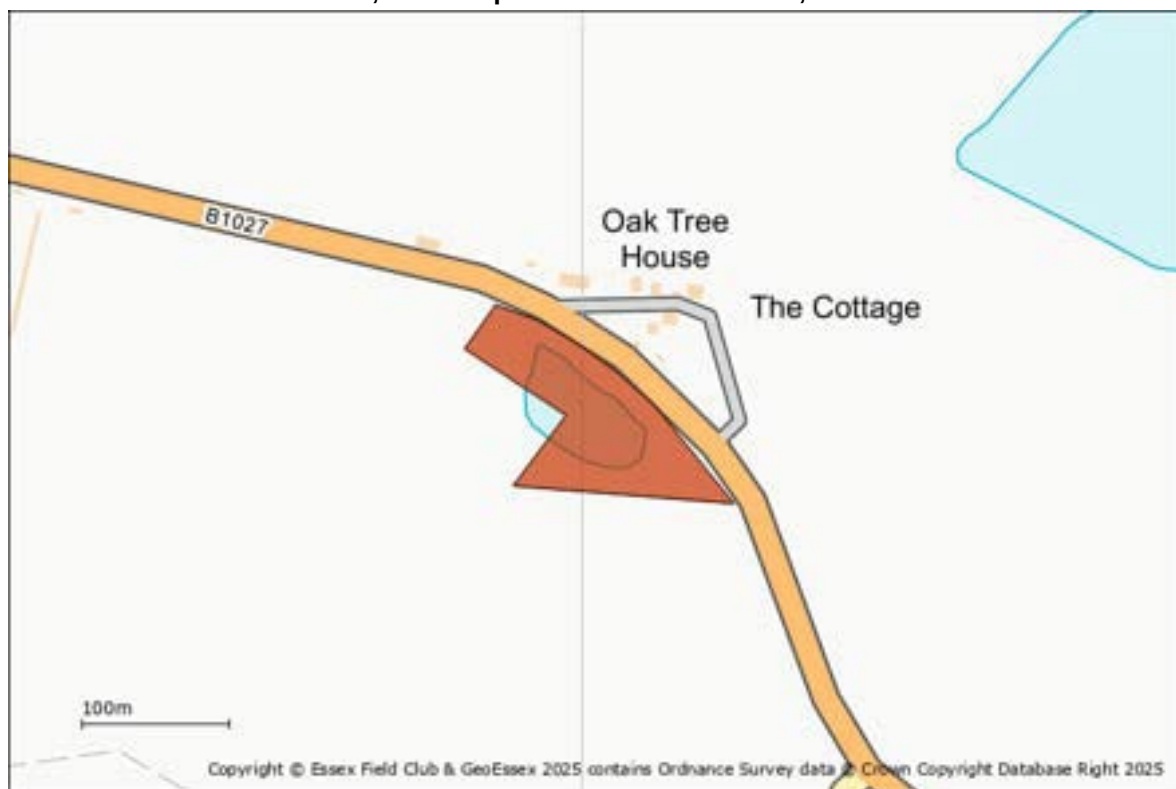

Fingringhoe Wick was purchased by the Essex Wildlife Trust in 1961. For its biodiversity importance the site is included within the Colne Estuary Site of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI). There is ample car parking but no access to the site by public transport.

7. Wivenhoe Gravel Pit SSSI, Site of Special Scientific Interest, TM050235

Site name: Wivenhoe Gravel Pit SSSI

Grid reference: TM 050235

Summary of geological interest

Site of Special Scientific Interest designated for the importance of its geology. Wivenhoe Gravel Pit is the type locality for the Wivenhoe Gravel, which was laid down by the Thames when it flowed across this area before being diverted to its present course by ice during the Anglian glaciation.

Site description

Wivenhoe Gravel Pit is the type locality for the Wivenhoe Gravel, part of the Kesgrave Sands and Gravels which was laid down by the Thames when it flowed across this area before being diverted to its present course by ice during the Anglian glaciation. The Wivenhoe Gravel was laid down during two cold stages of the Ice Age and interbedded within the gravel is an organic silty clay containing fossils from a warm or temperate climate. These include plants, pollen from temperate-climate trees, and beetle remains. This clay represents an intervening interglacial stage but unfortunately the fossils it contains are not yet sufficiently distinctive to identify which interglacial stage. However, judging from the position of the Wivenhoe Gravel in the old Thames terrace sequence it is likely to be the temperate interval that immediately preceded the Anglian glaciation (this glaciation brought about the diversion of the Thames about 450,000 years ago). Much work is therefore required before this interval, recognised in recent years elsewhere in Britain but undefined, can be fully evaluated. Its status as a full interglacial has also yet to be established and it may be just an interstadial (a short-lived temperate-climate event in a predominately cold period). It is possible that the sediments date from the latter part of the Cromerian interglacial, as defined by the Cromer Forest-bed in Norfolk.

The position of these temperate sediments in the Thames gravels is therefore highly significant, making Wivenhoe Gravel Pit an important source of evidence for reconstructing the evolution of the Thames.

Of additional interest at Wivenhoe Gravel Pit was the discovery of two flint flakes in the interglacial sediments that may have been worked by humans. If they represent a period of human occupation at Wivenhoe it will be the earliest evidence of humans anywhere in Essex and over 500,000 years old. They would be about the same age as the human tools and remains discovered at Boxgrove in Sussex, which are thought to represent occupation by Homo heidelbergensis, a species of human that is probably a direct ancestor of the Neanderthals.

Site name: Ardleigh Gravel Pit SSSI

Grid reference: TM 053 280

Summary of geological interest

Site of Special Scientific Interest designated for the importance of its geology.

Site description

Martells Quarry at Ardleigh is an important site for reconstructing the past climate and landscape of Essex. The quarry reveals a pale, buff gravel, known as Ardleigh Gravel - part of the Kesgrave Sands and Gravels - which was laid down in cold conditions during the Ice Age by the Thames when it was a very large river flowing across the Tendring peninsula. This is confirmed by beds of organic clay containing fossils of cold-climate plants such as mosses, grasses and sedges. The upper surface of the Ardleigh Gravel contains casts of ice wedges indicating arctic conditions. Also within the Ardleigh Gravel are beds of silty, dark grey organic clay, which had clearly been deposited in temperate (interglacial) conditions as they contained plant fossils including the remains of deciduous trees such as birch, oak, elm and alder and the remains of beetles. The Ardleigh Gravel is therefore a sandwich of sediments with deposits from two cold climate episodes represented here (the Ardleigh Lower Gravel and Ardleigh Upper Gravel), separated by an interglacial period.

The interglacial deposits are of considerable significance and may be unique in Britain. The deposits cannot be dated per se, but by comparison with other sites, and by reference to the geological sequence in the Netherlands, they are thought to belong to the Cromerian Complex. They could be as much as 700,000 years old. It is possible that the interglacial deposits here may justify designating Ardleigh quarry as the type site for a new early Pleistocene interglacial stage.

On top of the Ardleigh Gravel is the Martells Gravel, consisting of brown/orange gravel and sand with a slightly different stone content to the Ardleigh Gravel below (more Rhaxella chert - probably reworked from the Red Crag of the area). Evidence in the gravel of the river current direction shows that the water was flowing towards the west or south west which was a reversal of the direction of the current when the Ardleigh Gravel was deposited. The Martells Gravel was therefore not deposited by the Thames but by a local river flowing from the north-east. In the 1960s a skull fragment of a ziphoid whale was discovered at Ardleigh which was typical of those found in the Red Crag at Walton-on-the-Naze. This bone must have been reworked and transported here from the Walton area by this river.

At the very top of the Martells Gravel is a deformed, iron-rich deposit that is thought to represent a complex ancient soil horizon. This soil horizon has been found elsewhere and is known as the Valley Farm Soil, the redness indicating soil formation under a warm, dry Mediterranean climate. The deformation was caused by later periglacial activity, overprinting it with a cold climate soil known as the Barham Soil.

Site name: Cockaynes Wood Nature Reserve

Grid reference: TM 056 218

Brief description of site:

A recently restored gravel pit in Thames gravels, now a publicly-accessible nature reserve.

Summary of geological interest

Cockaynes Wood Nature Reserve includes part of the former Villa Quarry, a gravel pit which had exposures of Wivenhoe Gravel. Wivenhoe Gravel, part of the Kesgrave Sands and Gravels, was laid down by the Thames about 500,000 years ago when it flowed across this area before being diverted to its present course by ice during the Anglian glaciation (see separate site entry for Wivenhoe Gravel Pit). It was deposited just upstream of the point where the Thames joined a former course of the River Medway.

It may be possible to conserve or create a permanent cliff of gravel in the former pit which would be an extremely useful teaching aid for students and for public interest and education.

Other information

The reserve is jointly managed by Essex Wildlife Trust and Cockaynes Wood Trust, who lease the site from Brett Aggregates.

The vehicular site entrance is off Wivenhoe Road, Alresford, just north of the Railway bridge. The main vehicle gate is usually locked, but there is still parking space for about 6 cars. The site can be reached by walking down the track from the gate. Please be aware that this track is not a public right-of-way; it may sometimes be closed to the public.

10. TeG7 Mistley High Street Cobble Wall, Notified Local Geological Site, TM1174131822

Site name: Mistley High Street Cobble Wall

Grid reference: TM 11741 31822

Brief description of site:

Wall of considerable historic and geological interest.

Summary of geological interest

On the south side of Mistley High Street, east of the Post Office, is a brick wall, probably over 150 years old, with a section composed entirely of rounded cobbles. What makes this wall particularly unusual is the very high proportion of exotic rock types such as granite, lava, dolerite and gneiss. There are even several cobbles of rhomb-porphry, a distinctive lava from Larvik, in the Oslo region of Norway.

It was originally thought that the stones in the Mistley Wall might have been gathered locally. This is because 'exotic' rocks do occur in Essex, having been brought here during the Ice age by the Anglian Ice Sheet, some even from Norway. However, the great variety of rock types in this wall made this unlikely.

The answer was found following extensive research by geologist Ian Mercer who established from various written records and oral testimonies beyond any doubt that these rocks were brought to Mistley from Norway in ballast in trading ships in the early 19th century.

In the wall there are 280 million year old lavas from Larvik, near Oslo, with their distinctively-shaped crystals. These have provided a rock-solid link between Mistleys maritime past and this surviving, historic wall. A valuable display of geology as well as history lesson, the Mistley wall is a treasure of the Essex coast. It has considerable local historical conservation value.

The full story of the wall, and how the link with Mistleys maritime history was established, can be found in the December 2014 issue of the Magazine of the Geologists association (Mercer 2014).

11. St Osyth Pit SSSI, Site of Special Scientific Interest, TM11951703

Summary

Site of Special Scientific Interest designated for the importance of its geology.

The St. Osyth Gravel Pit SSSI is a triangular overgrown hollow which has been saved from landfilling but unfortunately no sand and gravel is now visible. This is an important site for providing evidence of the diversion of the Thames

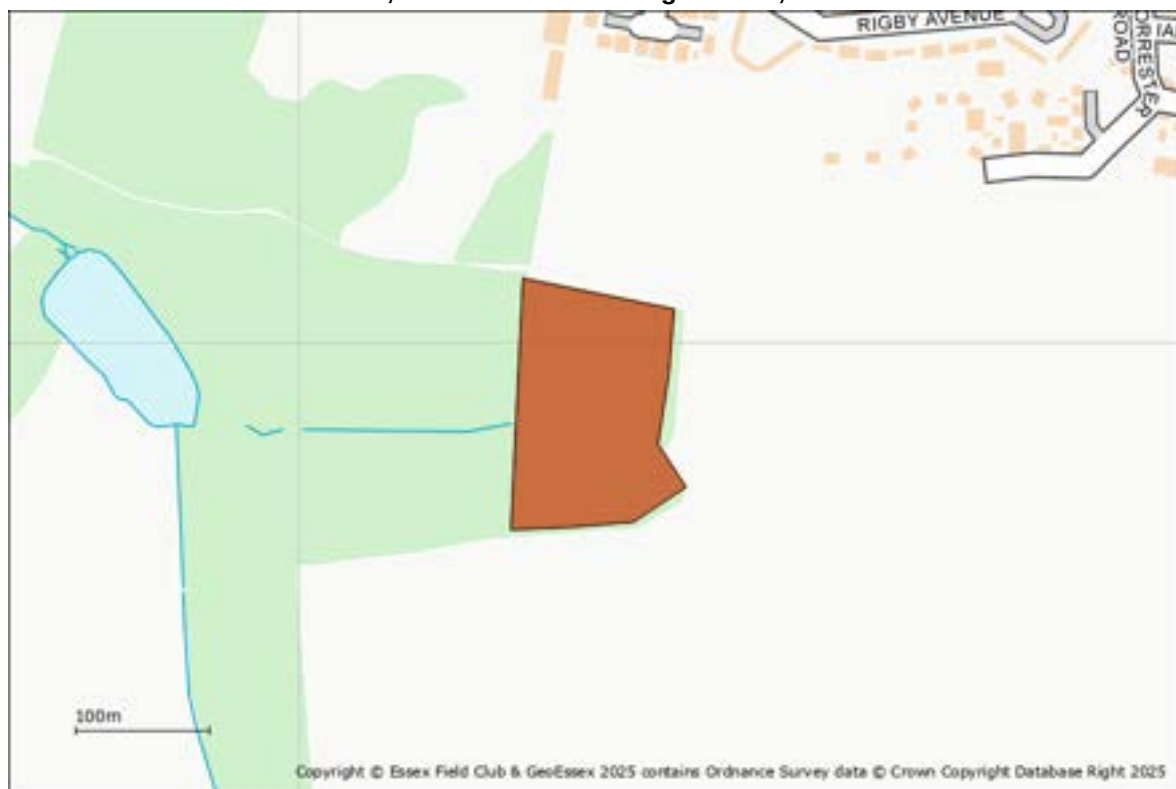

Site description

About 450,000 years ago a catastrophic change affected the Thames causing it to alter its course and adopt the route we know today. The gravel at St. Osyth pit is of two types: the Lower St. Osyth Gravel, which dates from just before the Thames was diverted, and above this is the Upper St. Osyth Gravel which was laid down after the Thames had disappeared from the area. This is clearly indicated by the stone content of the Lower Gravel which is typical of that deposited by the early Thames (the Kesgrave Sands and Gravels). The Upper Gravel, on the other hand, has fewer of the exotic stone types of the early Thames, such as quartz and quartzite, and more Rhaxella chert, brought in by meltwater streams from the nearby Anglian ice sheet.

The deposits reveal just how rapid the diversion was as the Thames suddenly ceased to flow through central Essex as a result of being blocked upstream in Hertfordshire and west Essex by the Anglian ice sheet. Gravel of the same age is present in the cliff at Holland-on-Sea. St. Osyth lies upstream from the confluence with the Thames and Medway rivers whereas Holland lies within the area of the confluence.

Brief description of site:

Former gravel pit in woodland adjacent to the Essex Way. The site is of geological interest with potential for geological education and research.

Site description

Waldringfield Gravel is the oldest deposit in Essex from the former course of the River Thames and could be as much as 800,000 years old. However, no exposures of this gravel are known.

The Ordnance Survey map of 1897 shows a gravel pit in woodland in Mistley Park, south-east of Furze Hill, which, according to the geological map, is situated on the Waldringfield Gravel. Today, evidence of this gravel working can be seen throughout the eastern half of the wood with several steep banks and hollows. A coarse, iron-stained gravel can be seen in small excavations made by rabbits, and pebbles from the gravel are on the paths and in the roots of fallen trees. The gravel appears to contain a high proportion of exotic pebbles that clearly have been carried some distance by the Thames, such as well-rounded pebbles of white vein quartz (from North Wales).

The woodland does not appear to have a name and so the name Furze Hill Gravel Pit has been adopted for this site. The wood is publicly accessible and the Essex Way, a long distance public footpath, runs along the northern boundary. Gravel is more clearly seen in the northern part of the wood close to the footpath and also near the southern boundary. In the centre of the wood there are areas of fine-grained gravel, which may be left over from gravel grading and processing on site in Victorian times.

Former gravel pit in the garden of Hillhouse Farm which has yielded Palaeolithic artifacts.

Summary of geological interest

A rich assemblage of Palaeolithic artefacts has been recovered from this former pit in the garden of Hillhouse Farm. The deposits are mapped as Cooks Green Gravel (laid down by the Thames-Medway River 600,000 years ago) but it has been suggested that the gravel may be a post-Anglian deposit of the nearby Holland Brook.

In 1970 a 3 metre wide face was cleaned at the north-east end. The pit is historically important; archaeologists such as Leakey, Oakley, Warren and Wymer carried out research here from 1933 to 1970.

The 'pit' has now been more or less levelled and survives as a depression. However, a face could be created with a digger if any future investigation is required.

Grid reference: TM 163319

Brief description of site:

Cliffs of brickearth on the River Stour at Wrabness have yielded bones of mammoth and elephant since at least the beginning of the eighteenth century.

Site description

Brickearth dating from an interglacial stage of the Ice Age is exposed in the cliff and foreshore eastwards from Wrabness sluice to beyond Wrabness Point. The brickearth has yielded bones of elephant and mammoth and has produced fossils since at least the beginning of the eighteenth century. Fossils are, however, very rare and are often in a very friable condition requiring great skill to extract and conserve them.

The earliest record is from 1701 when the Reverend Robert Rich, rector of Wrabness, found at Wrabness "diverse bones of an extraordinary bigness" and concluded that they were probably bones of elephants brought over by Emperor Claudius for use in his wars with the Britons. Bones of mammoth and straight-tusked elephant were also found here following a cliff fall in 1906.

The brickearth was originally thought to have dated from the Ipswichian interglacial stage (120,000 years ago), but is now thought to belong to the preceding interglacial stage which corresponds with Marine Isotope Stage 7 (approximately 200,000 years ago). The brickearth contains lenses of gravel and fine sand. Some of the brickearth on the foreshore near Wrabness sluice was reported to contain fossil shells.

Also along this section of the coast are terrace gravels from the River Stour which contain rocks derived from the Kesgrave Sands and Gravels (early Thames gravels). On the beach are occasional fossils derived from the Red Crag, which presumably originate from a former capping of basal Red Crag gravel at the top of the London Clay cliffs to the east.

Grid reference: TM 172323

Brief description of site:

Site of Special Scientific Interest designated for the importance of its geology. The cliffs at Wrabness provide the best onshore exposure of the Harwich Formation. They are the highest vertical cliffs in Essex.

Site description

The London Clay cliffs on the River Stour at Wrabness are the highest vertical cliffs in Essex and consist of the upper part of the Eocene Harwich Formation and the lower few metres of the Walton Member of the London Clay. They provide the best onshore exposure of the Harwich Formation.

The Wrabness cliffs are of particular interest because they contain a complete sequence of bands of volcanic ash, which probably originated from volcanoes in Scotland. These ash bands are present from the Harwich Stone Band to the top of the formation. Over 30 separate ash layers occur throughout some 10 metres of clay and silty clay, which was deposited in a subtropical sea about 50 million years ago. The succession has been dated partly by analysing the iron-rich minerals in the ash, which have preserved the direction of the Earth's magnetic field when the ash was laid down. This indicates that the succession is the same age as the Oldhaven Beds of Kent. The exposure of the Harwich Formation at Wrabness is of national importance as it provides the most complete succession of volcanic ashes attesting to the influence of early Eocene volcanism in southern England.

The same Eocene sediments contain an important fossil flora. Although the fossil fruit and seed flora from Wrabness is limited by comparison with some other sites, the importance of the Wrabness flora is in its mode of preservation. Here, some of the fruit and seeds are preserved in concretions as opposed to the carbonaceous preservation or preservation in iron pyrite that occurs elsewhere in the London Clay. This form of preservation is particularly important, as much detail has been retained which would otherwise have been obscured by the growth of pyrite. The preservation of these plant fossils in concretions has also protected them from the distortion that would have occurred as a result of shrinkage or through compression on burial. Wrabness has a great potential to provide new and significantly different insights into the structure and anatomy of the fossil floras of the London Clay.

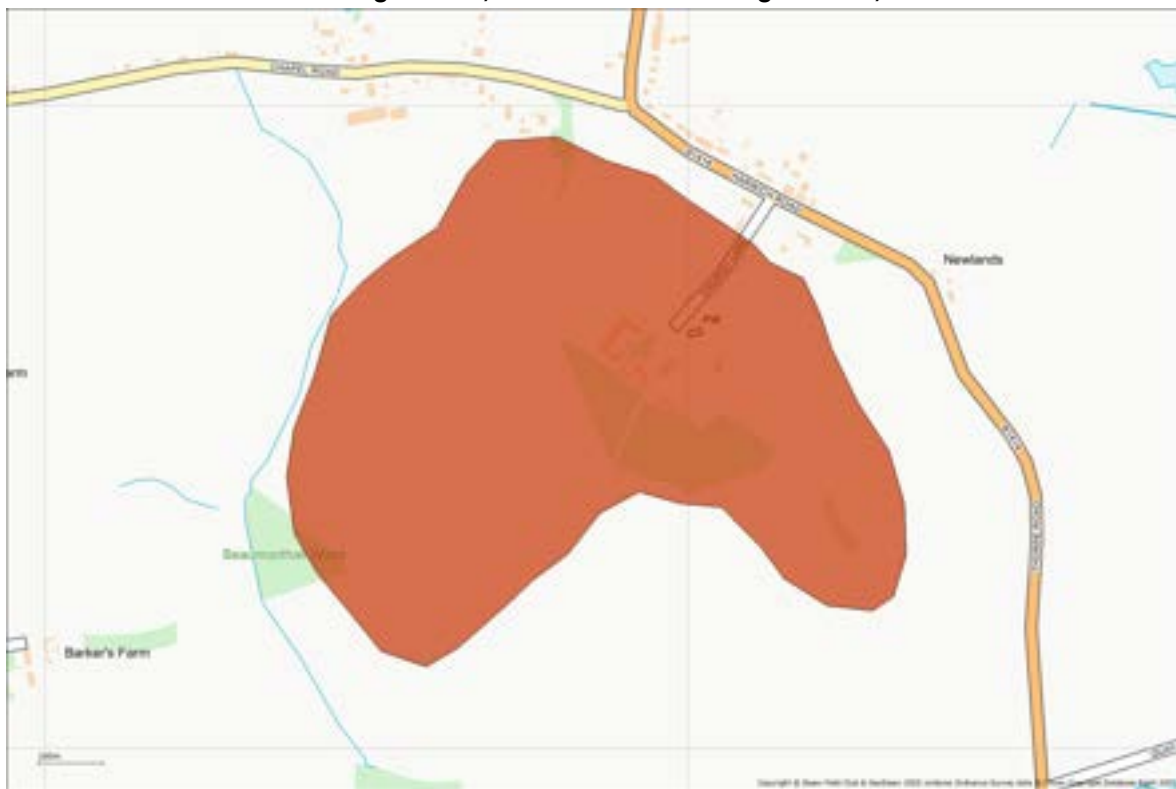

The Wrabness cliffs in some places show faults in the London Clay, which are records of prehistoric earthquakes. A fault was visible in the 19th century and illustrated in the 1885 geological survey memoir. It was obscured by a cliff fall but is said to be still visible at TM 170 322.

16. TeG1 Beaumont Red Crag Outlier, Notified Local Geological Site, TM180246

Site name: Beaumont Red Crag Outlier

Grid reference: TM 180246

Summary of geological interest

Site of geological interest with potential for geological education. The high ground at Beaumont Hall is capped with an outlier of shelly Red Crag which is visible in rabbit burrows and on footpaths. The site is also of importance in the history of geology. Any excavations in the area should be recorded. Site is private land and accessible only on public footpaths.

Site description

An isolated patch, or outlier, of Red Crag, about a quarter of a square mile in size, caps the top of the hill occupied by Beaumont Hall. It is one of the few fragments of a once continuous deposit of Red Crag across north Essex that has been almost entirely destroyed by erosion. The Red Crag in this part of Essex consists of loose sand with abundant fossil shells and the fossils of other marine animals that lived in the Red Crag Sea that existed about 2 million years ago.

The Red Crag at Beaumont was first brought to the attention of the scientific world by the well-known Essex geologist John Brown of Stanway, who obtained over 90 species of fossil shells from a pit near the south-eastern extremity of the outlier and privately published a list of them in 1846. At the end of the nineteenth century the amateur geologist Frederick Harmer (1835-1923) carried out a detailed study of the fossils of the Red Crag (see entry for Little Oakley) and re-opened Brown's pit where he succeeded in finding more than 260 species. Most of these were characteristic of the Walton Red Crag but a few were Arctic species which were rare or absent at Walton, indicating that this outlier may be slightly younger than the Walton Crag. With the permission of the landowner Harmer also dug a hole near the south-western limit of the Beaumont outlier which revealed 5 or 6 feet of Red Crag resting on London Clay. With the help of a labourer 7 or 8 tons of Crag sand were sifted and from this several species were encountered that were not found at the previous pit. Harmer published a detailed account of his work at Beaumont and elsewhere in the Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society in 1900.

Shelly Red Crag was formerly exposed in the sides of the pond near the church and in other temporary excavations made as part of the running of Beaumont Hall Farm. Farm workers would often come across the typical Red Crag gastropod Neptunia contraria that is known as the left-handed whelk because it spirals in the opposite direction to almost all other known gastropods. At Walton, the normal right-handed specimens also occur but at Beaumont these were apparently unknown to the farm labourers and Harmer reports that they had formulated a theory for this: Before the flood, everything was left-handed!

In 1900 the mineral content of the Red Crag at Beaumont was analysed by treating a 25 gram sample with concentrated hydrochloric acid. What remained was 50% quartz but the other 50% contained a rich assemblage of other minerals, some of which are familiar gemstones. Along with the more common rock-forming minerals such as feldspar and mica were rarer minerals such as zircon, rutile, kyanite, and ilmenite together with yellow crystals of corundum and green and blue grains of tourmaline. There were also tiny red garnets that were so plentiful that the heavy concentrate had a strong pinkish colour. Grains of topaz have also been found in the Red Crag although none were recorded from the Beaumont sample. The presence of such minerals in the Red Crag is evidence that these sands were derived from metamorphic rocks, probably from the erosion of the Scottish mountains, and may have been recycled several times over hundreds of millions of years before being deposited on the floor of the Red Crag Sea. As the Red Crag continues to be eroded, here and at Walton-on-the-Naze, these minerals will end up on to the floor of the North Sea the next stage in a continuous rock cycle.

The former Red Crag exposures at Beaumont are no longer accessible but fossil shells can be seen in places scattered on arable fields, such as by the public footpath east of Beaumont Hall Wood. Red Crag sand and shells can also often be seen thrown out of animal burrows in the ditch bank alongside the footpath west of Beaumont Hall.

Site name: Hill House Sarsen Stone

Grid reference: TM 2014 2964

Brief description of site:

Single sarsen stone adjacent to a roadside wall. Sarsen stones are extremely rare in the Tendring District.

Summary of geological interest

Against the boundary wall of Hill House is a sarsen stone about 1 metre high, 90 centimetres wide and just over 20 centimetres thick.

Sarsens are boulders of extremely hard sandstone that were formed about 55 million years ago during the Palaeocene period in sandy strata called the Reading Beds that occur on top of the Chalk.

Most sarsen stones in Essex were carried here by the Anglian ice sheet which covered most of Britain during the coldest period of the Ice Age, some 450,000 years ago. Sarsens are usually found in North Essex and Suffolk and it is unusual to find one this far east. It is possible that this stone was carried here from the North Downs of Kent by the River Medway.

It is obvious that this stone has been moved by humans to its present position but when and why this was done is not known. The stone was probably ploughed up from a local field. A local resident apparently claimed that it was placed against the wall so that the wheel of a cart could be wedged against it to stop the cart from rolling down the hill.

18. Little Oakley Channel Deposit SSSI, Site of Special Scientific Interest, TM223294

Summary

Site of Special Scientific Interest designated for the importance of its geology. The site consists of an interglacial channel, part of the Kesgrave Sands and Gravels, which was laid down by a former course of the River Thames, at the point where it may have been joined by the early River Medway. It has yielded numerous fossils. There are no current exposures.

Site description

Many important fossil discoveries depend on the right person being in the right place at the right time and the Little Oakley channel is a classic example of this.

During the Summer of 1939, only a few months before the outbreak of the Second World War, a sewer trench was being dug along the road through Little Oakley and the excavation was noticed by amateur geologist Samuel Hazzledine Warren as he was driving through the village. The sand thrown out of the excavation was found to be rich in shells, deer antlers and mammal bones and Warren described the discovery in the pages of the Essex Naturalist in 1940. Because of the war no further investigation was carried out at the time but it is surprising that, despite the apparent importance of the discovery, the site did not receive any more attention until the 1980s. Using Warren's notes, geologists then relocated the site using mechanical excavators. Warren had correctly identified the deposit as the infilling of a river channel of the same age as the famous Cromer Forest-bed in Norfolk which dates from an early part of the Ice Age before the arrival of the Anglian ice sheet.

The channel is cut into the Oakley Gravel, part of the Kesgrave Sands and Gravels, which was laid down by a former course of the River Thames, at the point where it may have been joined by the early River Medway. The Oakley Gravel is the downstream equivalent of the Ardleigh Gravel and about 550,000 years old. The channel contains fossils that include the bones rhinoceros, giant deer, hyaena, horse, boar, vole and fish, a rich assemblage of freshwater shells and a fine pollen record which has enabled geologists to reconstruct the flora and fauna of this distant period of the Ice Age. The channel can be dated by comparing the assemblage of mollusc shells with those from sites in north Norfolk, and the pollen assemblage with sites in the Netherlands. These indicate a broadly Cromerian age, though it is not clear whether it is the same age as the interglacial deposits at Ardleigh Gravel Pit (see separate site entry) or later. This is confirmed by analysis of amino acids from mollusc shells. Although the channels exact age is still not known it is thought to be about 575,000 years old. A remnant of the much older Red Crag, for which Little Oakley is also well known (see separate site record), lies adjacent to and just below the channel deposit.

The 1980s excavation was backfilled and there is now no indication on the surface that this strip on the edge of a farm field is one of the most important geological sites in Essex.

19. TeG5 Gants Pit (site of), Notified Local Geological Site, TM24083127

Site name: Gants Pit (site of)

Grid reference: TM 2408 3127

Brief description of site:

Gants Pit is a classic site of geological and archaeological interest with potential for education and research. It was the richest site for Palaeolithic hand-axes in Essex. It is a disused and infilled gravel pit which is now occupied by a primary school and playground. Any significant excavations on the site should be recorded.

Summary of geological interest

Gants Pit in Dovercourt is famous as the richest site for Palaeolithic hand-axes in Essex. It was situated on the west side of the junction of the main Harwich Road and Parkeston Road and is named after the former tenant of Pound Farm, Mr. W. Gant, who leased the land. It is sometimes referred to as Pound Farm Pit. The site is now levelled and occupied by Spring Meadow Primary School and playing field.

The first discoveries were made in 1908 by a Lieut.-Colonel W. Underwood who, while walking in the area, noticed gravel being worked at this spot which was a farm field overlooking the Stour valley. He suspected that it was a likely spot for flint implements and interviewed the workmen. They informed him that they knew nothing of such objects but had collected a large number of bones, which they had sold to a passing rag and bone merchant! Underwood searched the piles of gravel on the floor of the pit and did indeed find evidence of worked flints. He returned to the pit on a later occasion with representative examples of Palaeolithic implements for the men to see, and asked them to look out for such things. This proved to be great success and over 150 hand-axes were found in just three years.

The site was independently discovered by the Essex amateur geologist and prehistorian Samuel Hazzledine Warren who took a particular interest in the hand-axes and managed to persuade the workmen to write in pencil on the implements the depth at which they found them. The results of this exercise demonstrated that the implements were found throughout the 9 foot (3 metre) depth of the pit but they had a greater surface patina the higher up they were in the gravel. This showed the weathering effect of the percolation of ground water over thousands of years. A few of the hand-axes were very slightly rolled but most were in fresh condition with no abrasion, which meant that the river hadn't transported them very far. Warren therefore concluded that this was the debris of an important Palaeolithic living site that had been washed by the river into a bank of gravel and sand.

The pit ceased working in the 1920s. The site is now levelled and occupied by Spring Meadow Primary School and playing field. There has, however, recently been renewed interest in the site and investigations were carried out in 2001 by a team of archaeologists and geologists led by David Bridgland. This was following up on an observation that gravel with Palaeolithic flakes was exposed in the foundations for a southern extension of the school in the 1980s. Several Palaeolithic flakes were recovered in 2001, leading to further excavations in 2006 when three trenches were dug using a JCB excavator in different parts of the site. One trench revealed fragments of fossil mammal bone and a number of Palaeolithic artefacts, which appears to confirm that the mammal fauna and the artefacts came from the same gravel. These investigations established the approximate extent of the gravel remaining beneath the site, which may hold further information about the climate and wildlife of the area when these early humans were living here. It is also hoped to establish an accurate age for the site. The results also found that the original gravel pit was quite small, probably no larger than the footprint of the main school buildings, which makes the large number of hand-axes found all the more remarkable. The investigations were hampered by waterlogged conditions at the base of the trenches that reached the impervious London Clay bedrock. A surprising discovery, however, was made at the base of the trench at the eastern corner of the site. Here was found a thin remnant of Red Crag, consisting of sand with numerous fossil shells, lying on top of London Clay.

A total of 208 hand axes have come from Gants Pit. Some of them were large and beautiful, and many were magnificently worked, their colour ranging from yellowish brown to lightish blue. The mammal bones found represented species such as beaver, rhinoceros, straight-tusked elephant, fallow deer, red deer and ox (aurochs). The gravel that contained the implements and bones appears to be a local terrace gravel from the Stour valley, banked up against the much older Oakley Gravel, which is of Thames-Medway origin.

Material from Gants Pit is distributed around several museums including Ipswich, Colchester, Norwich, Cambridge, Oxford and the Natural History Museum in London. The majority of the hand-axes are in the British Museum.

20. Harwich Foreshore SSSI, Site of Special Scientific Interest, TM263320

Summary

Site of Special Scientific Interest designated for the importance of its geology. This locality is the best exposure of the Harwich Stone Band, the most distinctive of the ash bands in the Harwich Formation at the base of the London Clay. The site extends along the foreshore from TM 263 316 to TM 263 323.

Site description

This locality is particularly important as the best exposure of the Harwich Stone Band, the most distinctive of the ash bands in the Harwich Formation at the base of the London Clay which contains volcanic ash from explosive volcanic eruptions in Scotland during Eocene times some 50 million years ago. The stone band makes this part of the coast the only naturally occurring rocky shore along the entire distance between Norfolk and Kent and may even be the reason for the existence of the Harwich peninsula. The Harwich Stone Band contains attractive veins of green banded calcite (calcium carbonate) which can be cut and polished and is one of the few decorative stones native to Essex. Samuel Dale, the Essex naturalist and author of The History and Antiquities of Harwich and Dovercourt (1730), records that in his time the streets of Harwich were cobbled with dressed stones taken from this bed.

The foreshore is also of prime importance for London Clay fossils, particularly for fossil fruits and seeds from the Eocene rainforest. Also found are fossil sharks teeth amongst the beach shingle. Harwich is also famous for numerous fossils found by the workmen employed in the Harwich cement industry. These include some of the worlds first fossils of early mammals that were beginning to spread across the globe following the extinction of the dinosaurs. The most famous fossil found was Hyracotherium, the earliest ancestor of the horse (George 2010). Fossil fish and many giant fossil turtles were also found, several of which are on display in Ipswich and Norwich museums.

The fossils from Harwich have been collected and studied for more than 300 years making this an important site in the history of geology (see separate entry for Beacon Cliff).

21. The Naze SSSI, Site of Special Scientific Interest, TM266235

Summary

Site of Special Scientific Interest designated for the importance of its geology. Spectacular cliffs of London Clay overlain by Red Crag. Extensive exposure of London Clay on foreshore. Important for Eocene fossils (particularly mammals and birds). Type locality for the Waltonian Red Crag. Also a fine example of rotational landslips.

Site description

The most spectacular exposure of Red Crag in East Anglia is at the Naze where the red, shelly sand can be seen resting on blue-grey London Clay. The Naze is one of the finest geological sites in Britain; both the Red Crag and London Clay here are of international importance and the cliffs are designated a Site of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI). The Red Crag and the overlying sediments represent a remarkably complete sequence of late Pliocene/early Pleistocene deposits which has yielded information on climatic deterioration at the beginning of the Ice Age. Digging in the cliffs is not permitted but fossil shells are numerous in the slipped masses. The cliffs can be dangerous in wet weather.

The underlying London Clay was laid down in a subtropical sea during the Eocene period, some 50 million years ago. The coastline at the time was some distance away and consisted of rainforest dominated by mangroves, similar to that found in present day Malaysia. Fruits and seeds, twigs, and logs of wood from these rainforest plants were washed into sea and can be found preserved in pyrite (iron sulphide) in great numbers on the beach beneath the cliffs. This fossil wood made up the bulk of the copperas stones, which was the raw material for the local copperas industry. The London Clay at Walton is famous for the best-preserved bird fossils of Eocene age in the world. The fossilised bones of early mammals that lived in the rainforest have also been found on the beach (see entry for Harwich). Also found amongst the beach shingle are fossil sharks teeth and fish bones. The London Clay also contains layers of volcanic ash from eruptions in Scotland during the time the London Clay sea was in existence.

The rust-red colour of the Red Crag sand and its contained fossils is the most distinctive feature of the cliffs and is due to the former presence of pyrite that was washed from the London Clay into the Red Crag and there oxidised. The final product of this chemical reaction is a red iron oxide, which has stained the sand and fossil shells producing attractive colours. Red iron oxide (ferric iron) needs contact with the air to form. Thus the thickness of the iron staining may indicate that the Red Crag was exposed to the air in what is now Essex and East Anglia for a long period before it was submerged again and the next geological stratum (the Norwich Crag) deposited. This is evidence of significant changes of sea level or uplift and subsidence of the land.

The Red Crag is 4-5 metres thick, comprising shelly sands with sedimentary structures indicating that it was deposited in underwater dunes at a water depth of 20-30 metres. The Red Crag Sea was home to an astonishing number of species of shellfish - nearly 300 species have been recorded from the Naze which shows the extraordinarily rich fauna of the Red Crag Sea which existed over what is now Essex and East Anglia about two million years ago. Some of these species have a preference for warmer waters and these seem to be less common in the younger outcrops of Red Crag in Suffolk with arctic species beginning to appear. This is taken by some to be an indication of the onset of the Ice Age, which is why the Red Crag was classed as early Pleistocene in age. This argument is not universally accepted and the Red Crag is now placed in the Pliocene.

The Pleistocene deposits overlying the Red Crag, once over 4 metres thick, have been reduced as the cliffs have receded. From the base they consist of sand, a sequence of sands, silts and clays (from which fossil pollen has been obtained), Cooks Green Gravel, further silty deposits and brickearth. The pollen assemblage is dominated by alder and silver fir but there is also a type of pollen that cannot be related to any species known today and is referred to as type X•. This species was thought to be representative of the Hoxnian interglacial stage (see entry for Clacton cliffs) but this cannot be correct, as the overlying Cooks Green Gravel is older than this. The Cooks Green Gravel was actually laid down by the River Thames when it flowed across this area before the arrival of the Anglian ice sheet. The Pleistocene sediments at the top of the cliff are noticeably contorted and deformed which was caused by the freezing and thawing of permafrost during the most recent glacial stage when the climate of the Walton area was similar to the present day arctic.

The Naze cliffs also provide a magnificent example of rotational landslips, a sight that is becoming increasingly rare as much of the coastline is subjected to coast protection works. Another example in Essex is at Hadleigh Castle near Southend. The slippage is mostly caused by water passing through the Pleistocene deposits and Red Crag and resting on the impervious London Clay, creating a spring line. This saturates and weakens the base of the Red Crag, causing the slips.

Above all, the Naze cliffs are a stunning and increasingly rare example of a natural, wild coastline which benefits wildlife and visitors alike. This is in sharp contrast to virtually every other section of high ground on the Essex coast that has been subjected to extensive coast protection work.

The Heritage Centre housed in the old lifeboat house in the town has a few fossils on display.

LOCAL WILDLIFE SITES COLCHESTER DISTRICT

Co136 Black Brook, Boxted/Langham (54.2 ha) TM 020323

This extensive mosaic of habitats associated with the Black Brook between Boxted and Langham provides a valuable wildlife corridor through a distinctive local landscape.

To the west of the site, willow (Salix spp.) and Alder (Alnus glutinosa) dominates a very wet narrow woodland corridor. The waterlogged ground supports several plant species of interest including Marsh-marigold (Caltha palustris), Common Marsh-bedstraw (Galium palustre), Bog Stitchwort (Stellaria uliginosa), Lesser Spearwort (Ranunculus flammula), Opposite-leaved Golden-saxifrage (Chrysosplenium oppositifolium) and abundant Cuckooflower (Cardamine pratensis). Drier areas have tall Ash (Fraxinus excelsior) over a ground flora dominated by Broad Buckler-fern (Dryopteris dilatata), with small patches of Climbing Corydalis (Ceratocarpus claviculata).

Between Boxted Cross and Old Mill Road, a small compartment of probable ancient woodland to the north of the Black Brook has Ash (Fraxinus excelsior), Alder and some Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur) forming the high canopy, with Grey Willow (Salix cinerea) in the shrub canopy. Here, the higher ground is drier with Bluebell (Hyacinthoides non-scripta) and Pignut (Conopodium majus). Down slope, this grades into damper conditions that favour Wood Sorrel (Oxalis acetosella) and Yellow Archangel (Lamium galeobdolon). Towards the Black Brook the ground is very wet, typically supporting more Opposite-leaved Golden-saxifrage.

An unusual feature either side of Old Mill Road, are banks with very old Holly (Ilex aquifolium) coppice with Pedunculate Oak standards. To the east of the road, the habitat changes and is characterised by grassland and plantation woodland. The higher grassy slopes exhibit a sandy acid soil with species such as Early Hair-grass (Aira praecox), Common Stork's-bill (Erodium cicutarium) and Sheep's Sorrel (Rumex acetosella). The lower streamside grassland has in contrast, species of neutral grassland including Sweet Vernal-grass (Anthoxanthum odoratum) and Meadow-grasses (Poa spp.).

East of Greyhound Hill grazed open grassland lies to the south of Black Brook, with plantation blocks with Sycamore (Acer pseudoplatanus), Sweet Chestnut (Castanea sativa) and Alder coppice. The grassland is most interesting near to a pond west of Grove Hill. Here, Lesser Spearwort and Cuckooflower are found in the wet grassland.

The easternmost block of habitat has shallow water located north of the Black Brook with tussocks of emergent and marginal rush (Juncus sp.). Other species found in the waterlogged zone include Skullcap (Scutellaria galericulata), Water Mint (Mentha aquatica), Bog Stitchwort and Water Forget-me-not (Myosotis scorpioides). This habitat grades into drier neutral grassland, which in turn grades to a semi-acid grassland slope.

Ownership and Access

The site is believed to be in private ownership, with multiple landowners likely. It is crossed by several public footpaths and highways.

Habitats of Principal Importance in England

Lowland Mixed Deciduous Woodland, Lowland Dry Acid Grassland, Wet Woodland

Selection Criteria

HC1 – Ancient Woodland Sites

HC2 – Lowland Mixed Deciduous Woodland on Non-ancient Sites

HC3 – Other Priority Habitat Woodland Types on Non-ancient Sites

HC11 – Other Neutral Grasslands

HC13 – Heathland and Acid Grassland

Rationale

The woodland between Boxted Cross and Old Mill Road is believed to be ancient due to the indicator plant species present. The Grove, further east, is also very old, but there is no clear evidence to suggest that it is also ancient and so the non-ancient criteria are used for this and other more obviously recent woodland blocks, including areas of wet woodland.

Condition Statement

Variable

Management Issues

Many parts of the site are not being managed and this will lead to a decline in condition over time. Rhododendron (Rhododendron ponticum) is scattered throughout the various planted compartments; it is a non-native species that can invade and overwhelm woodland understorey to the detriment of its ground flora.

This ancient woodland has had a long history of piecemeal assimilation into the gardens of adjacent houses and the boundary illustrated here should be regarded as provisional, since it is not always possible to tell where residential curtilages end.

The northern end of the wood is composed of Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur) and Silver Birch (Betula pendula) with an open understorey featuring scattered Hazel (Corylus avellana) and Holly (Ilex aquifolium). The ground flora is also sparse, being dominated by Bramble (Rubus fruticosus) and Bracken (Pteridium aquilinum). Further south the canopy includes Ash (Fraxinus excelsior) and Rowan (Sorbus aucuparia), the understorey is thicker, and the ground layer is more diverse, with Wood Sage (Teucrium scorodonia), Honeysuckle (Lonicera periclymenum) and some Bluebell (Hyacinthoides non-scripta).

Ownership and Access

The site is in multiple private ownerships and there is no public access.

This site comprises the grounds of a derelict house (undergoing restoration in 2008). The large ornamental gardens, with veteran native trees, exotic ornamentals, lake and areas of dry acid grassland have been left to nature for many years and now support a wealth of wildlife, including the UK and Essex BAP Stag Beetle. Other species of interest include Grass Snake, Slow-worm and Adder; and a diverse bumblebee population. Dead-wood habitat, an important component of veteran tree stands, is present in good quantity.

The majority of this site lies within the National Trust's Bridges Farm holding and comprises alluvial floodplain pastures with dissecting ditches and the banks of the River Stour. Whilst the pastures have received some agricultural improvement and are not floristically rich, they remain of value due to the relative scarcity of this habitat type and their associated invertebrate interest. The drainage ditches and riverbank have a good flora that includes Marsh Bedstraw (Galium palustre), Water Horsetail (Equisetum fluviatile), Meadowsweet (Filipendula ulmaria), Purple Loosestrife (Lythrum salicaria), Reed Canary-grass (Phalaris arundinacea), Yellow Flag-iris (Iris pseudacorus), Common Valerian (Valeriana officinalis), Water Dock (Rumex hydrolapathum), Common Meadow-rue (Thalictrum flavum) and Greater Pond-sedge (Carex riparia). This series of pastures represents one of the largest blocks of remnant flood plain grassland in northeast Essex. Although not especially species-rich, the pastures, in association with the wet ditches and tree-lined hedgerows, form an important grassland resource that extends over the county boundary into Suffolk and also adjoins the Cattawade Marshes SSSI. The site supports a small number of native Black (or Water) Poplars Populus nigra ssp. betulifolia, which is an Essex BAP species and the habitat would be an appropriate location for the planting of further specimens of this nationally uncommon tree as part of BAP conservation efforts. The Old Dedham River channel remains wet through the summer and supports varied aquatic and marginal vegetation, including Branched Bur-reed (Sparganium erectum), Purple Loosestrife (Lythrum salicaria), Common Reed (Phragmites australis) and Reed Canary-grass (Phalaris arundinacea). A number of large old Osiers (Salix viminalis) on the river bank provide good habitat conditions for dead wood invertebrates, whilst the ditches support some locally distributed invertebrates, such as the snails Valvata piscinalis and Bithynia leachi.

Reproduced from the Ordnance Survey® mapping by permission of Ordnance Survey® on behalf of The Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office. © Crown Copyright. Licence number AL 100020327

The core of this site is made up of two blocks of old woodland reduced in size by the construction of Ardleigh Reservoir and then extended by a combination of planting and natural colonisation. The result is a linear strip of woodland along the southern shore of the reservoir's western arm, on the bank of the stream valley that existed before the reservoir was constructed.

The woodland canopy comprises Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur), Ash (Fraxinus excelsior) and Silver Birch (Betula pendula) with localised Beech (Fagus sylvatica) and Sweet Chestnut (Castanea sativa). The eastern block of woodland also contains Wild Cherry (Prunus avium) and there are a variety of conifers planted at the easternmost end. The understorey consists of Holly (Ilex aquifolium), Hawthorn (Crataegus monogyna), Hazel coppice (Corylus avellana) and Elder (Sambucus nigra), with coppiced Alder (Alnus glutinosa) and willow (Salix spp.) along the reservoir edge.

The ground flora is typified by Bracken (Pteridium aquilinum), Bramble (Rubus fruticosus agg.), Foxglove (Digitalis purpurea), Broad Buckler Fern (Dryopteris dilatata), Remote Sedge (Carex remota), Climbing Corydalis (Ceratocarpus claviculata), Lesser Celandine (Ranunculus ficaria) and Bluebell (Hyacinthoides non-scripta). Although heavily shaded, the reservoir edge supports some emergent species, with Water Mint (Mentha aquatica) most prominent.

Ownership and Access

The majority of the site is believed to form part of the land associated with the reservoir, but some appears to be in private ownership. There is no public access, although the site can be viewed from a public footpath that runs through the field to the south.

Positioned on the edge of reservoir, this mosaic contains grassland, scrub and a small Alder (Alnus glutinosa) and willow (Salix) wood. The scrub is mainly young Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur), willow, Blackthorn (Prunus spinose), Hawthorn (Crataegus monogyna), Broom (Cytisus scoparius), and Bramble (Rubus fruticosus agg.).

Remaining areas of open grassland are varied, with some becoming rough and tussocky, but others continuing to support communities that reflect the free-draining soil. Typical species include Red Fescue (Festuca rubra), Rough Meadow Grass (Poa trivialis), bents (Agrostis spp.), Common Vetch (Vicia sativa), Common Bird's-foot-trefoil (Lotus corniculatus), Musk Mallow (Malva moschata), Common Knapweed (Centaurea nigra), Ox-eye Daisy (Leucanthemum vulgare) and Perforate St John's-wort (Hypericum perforatum). There are also patches of lichen heath, dominated by Cladonia lichens, and acid grassland with species such as Sheep's Sorrel (Rumex acetosella), and Field Wood-rush (Luzula campestris).

There is also a small colony of the ERDL species, Pyramidal Orchid (Anacamptis pyramidalis).

Ownership and Access

The habitat is presumed to be part of the Reservoir land holding. There is no public right of way.

Selection criteria

HC28 – Small-component Mosaics

Rationale

None of the component habitats – scrub, acid grassland and wet woodland – is of sufficient quality to qualify alone, but in combination this is a valuable habitat. Although an ERDL species, the pyramidal Orchid population is not sufficiently significant to satisfy the SC1 criteria.

This site consists of probably ancient streamside woodland with younger woodland blocks of varying ages on the valley sides. In the central part of the stream valley, where there was once a mill, is a complex of marsh and wet woodland habitats.

The stream banks and adjoining woodlands are dominated by Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur) standards with Wild Cherry (Prunus avium), Field Maple (Acer campestre), Holly (Ilex aquifolium) and occasional Hornbeam (Carpinus betula). The ground flora is very rich, including: Bluebell (Hyacinthoides non-scripta), Yellow Archangel (Lamium galeobdolon), Dog's Mercury (Mercurialis perennis), Wood Sorrel (Oxalis acetosella), Moschatel (Adoxa moschatellina), Creeping-jenny (Lysimachia nummularia), Enchanter's-nightshade (Circaea lutetiana), Wavy Hair-grass (Deschampsia flexuosa), Primrose (Primula vulgaris), Tutsan (Hypericum androsaemum), Wood Sedge (Carex sylvatica), Remote Sedge (Carex remota) and Wood Anemone (Anemone nemorosa). A diverse range of ferns is also present including Hart's-tongue (Asplenium scolopendrium) and the Essex Red Data List species Scaly Male Fern (Dryopteris affinis) and Lady Fern (Athyrium filix-femina).

The upper slopes mainly hold coppiced Sweet Chestnut (Castanea sativa) with occasional Ash (Fraxinus excelsior) and Pedunculate Oak standards and an understorey of Hazel (Corylus avellana), Field Maple, Hawthorn (Crataegus monogyna). The ground flora includes Bluebell, but is not as diverse as the stream sides. Some spring lines, dropping down to the stream, are marked by Alder (Alnus glutinosa)

The more recent woodland blocks to the east and south – including The Broomhangings – consist of Pedunculate Oak, Silver Birch (Betula pendula), Elder (Sambucus nigra) and Hawthorn with Bramble. The eastern block includes some small scale gravel workings and the ground flora includes Wood Sage (Teucrium scorodonia) and Heath Speedwell (Veronica officinalis).

In the central part of the stream valley, Alder and Willow (Salix spp.) woodland dominates in parts with more open areas of Common Nettle (Urtica dioica), Water Mint (Mentha aquatica) Great Willowherb (Epilobium hirsutum), Common Hemp-nettle (Galeopsis tetrahit), Water Chickweed (Myosoton aquaticum) and Wild Angelica (Angelica sylvestris).

Ownership and Access

The site is believed to be in private ownership, but it is crossed by public footpaths.

Habitats of Principal Importance in England

Lowland Mixed Deciduous Woodland

Selection criteria

HC1 – Ancient Woodland

HC2 – Lowland Mixed Deciduous Woodland on Non-ancient Sites

HC3 – Wet Woodland

HC30 - Wildlife Corridors

Rationale

The presence of indicator species suggests that the woodland along the stream banks is ancient, but the majority of the woodland is likely to be more recent. The willow and Alder woodland of the stream corridor matches the description of the Wet Woodland Priority Habitat, although it is not particularly old. The whole site forms a significant block of linear, semi-natural habitat forming a strong natural corridor on the eastern side of Colchester.

Condition Statement

Favourable

Management Issues

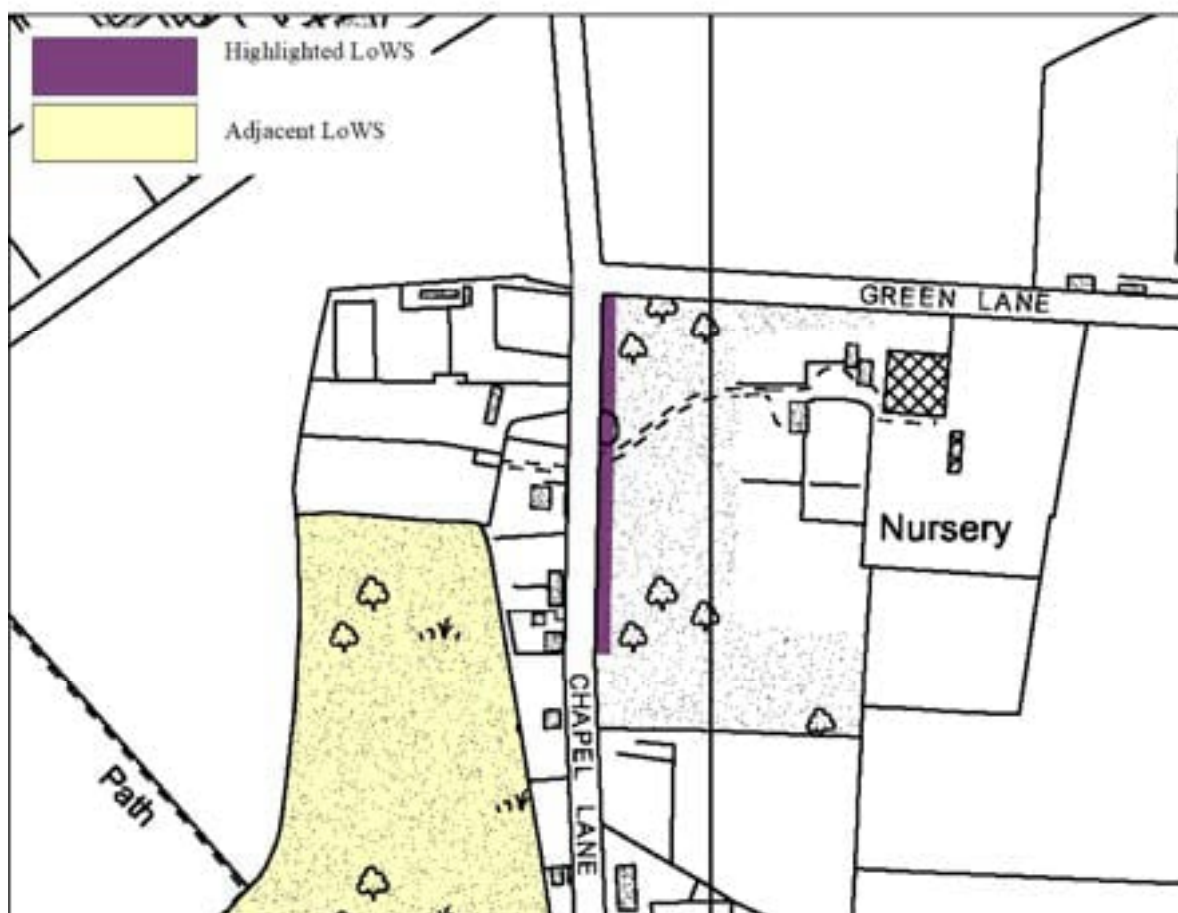

The woodland is under active coppice management, but there has been some invasion by Sycamore (Acer pseudoplatanus), particularly in the northern-most block.

This site includes the roadside verge and the adjacent wood bank and ditch, and it has been designated for its population of Common Polypody (Polypodium vulgare), an Essex Red Data List fern. It forms part of a much larger Essex County Council Special Roadside Verge, most of which has lost its botanical interest. Other species present include Common Knapweed (Centaurea nigra), Common Bent (Agrostis tenuis), a hawkweed (Hieracium sabaudum), Dog's Violet (Viola spp.) and Wood Sage (Teucrium scorodonia).

The ownership of the verge is unknown, but the wood bank is under private ownership. Public access is limited to the carriageway.

Te8 Pyecats Corner Verges, Elmstead Market (1.1 ha) TM 043254

These narrow verges are located between arable fields and display an interesting flora that reflects the acidic soil-type and the heathland history of this area – the southern verges were once part of Whitmore Heath. The grassland consists of Common Bent-grass (Agrostis capillaris), Red Fescue (Festuca rubra), and cat's-tail (Phleum sp.) with (Hieracium sabaudum), Common Knapweed (Centaurea nigra), Agrimony (Agrimonia eupatoria), Wood Sage (Teucrium scorodonia), Lesser Stitchwort (Stellaria graminea) and Barren Strawberry (Fragaria vesca). The most significant species is the ERDL species Betony (Stachys officinalis), present in patches throughout the verges.

Ownership and Access

The verges are in private ownership. Public access is restricted to the carriageway.

Habitats of Principal Importance in England

None

Selection criteria

HC11 – Other Neutral Grassland

SC1 – Vascular Plants

Rationale

The species present, include some that are notable in a county context, suggest a long continuity as grassland and, although they reflect acidic soils, the community present does not represent any of the NVC communities associated with the Lowland Dry Acid Grassland Priority Habitat. The population of Betony, a species exhibiting drastic decline in the county, is significant enough to justify the Vascular Plants criterion.

Condition Statement

Variable

Management Issues

Some sections of the verge have become dominated by Cock's-foot (Dactylis glomerata), False Oat-grass (Arrhenatherum elatius), Common Nettle (Urtica dioica) and Creeping Thistle (Cirsium arvense). The verges are sensitive to changes in management and to any highway maintenance work, especially due to their narrowness.

Te58 Furze Hills Complex (20.0 ha) TM 118311

This site comprises grassland to the west with woodland and a lake to the east. The variable topography of the area results in a mosaic of different habitat types. Furze Hills is essentially an area of fairly recent secondary Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur) woodland, with small areas of Alder (Alnus glutinosa) coppice in lower valley areas. However, throughout the woodland are many “veteran” Oak trees. The oldest is recorded as the second oldest tree in Essex, and is possibly up to 800 years old. These veteran trees can support a great diversity of invertebrate species, and with age become very important as bat roosting sites.

The grassland components vary considerably in character. Those of the higher ground exhibit dry acid conditions with Sheep's Sorrel (Rumex acetosella), Common Bird's-foot-trefoil (Lotus corniculatus) and Heath Bedstraw (Galium saxatile) in the herb flora. Nearer the stream the sward is either a tussocky Rush (Juncus spp.)-dominated pasture with Tufted Hair-grass (Deschampsia cespitosa), or a damp meadow with Sweet Vernal-grass (Anthoxanthum odoratum), Crested Dog's-tail (Cynosurus cristatus), Rough Meadow-grass (Poa trivialis), Floating Sweet-grass (Glyceria fluitans) and Marsh Foxtail (Alopecurus geniculatus). Sweet Chestnut (Castanea sativa) and Hazel (Corylus avellana) coppice with Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur) and Birch (Betula sp.) standards dominate this ancient woodland fragment, which has been damaged by the October 1987 and subsequent storms. Bluebell (Hyacinthoides non-scripta), Red Campion (Silene dioica), Bramble (Rubus fruticosus agg.), Male Fern (Dryopteris filix-mas) and Scaly Male Fern (Dryopteris affinis) are the most prevalent ground flora plants.

Te70 Pilcox Wood (3.1 ha) TM 138252

This is a fine example of NVC community W10 Oak-Bracken-Bramble woodland that is probably very close to the natural climax vegetation type for the light soils of the Tendring plateau. The canopy is dominated by Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur), with some very old Sweet Chestnut (Castanea sativa) coppice, amongst Downy Birch (Betula pubescens), Hazel (Corylus avellana) and Holly (Ilex aquifolium). Hornbeam (Carpinus betulus) is rare. Crab Apple (Malus sylvestris) is unusually common throughout the wood, it being a tree often found as one or two specimens in any one wood. Large quantities of standing and fallen dead wood form an important part of the woodland ecosystem. As is often the case with this woodland type, the ground flora is not especially species rich, being dominated by Bracken (Pteridium aquilinum) and Bramble (Rubus fruticosus agg.). However, species such as Wood Sage (Teucrium scorodonia), Foxglove (Digitalis purpurea) and Honeysuckle (Lonicera periclymenum) occur at low density.

Te90 Wrabness Depot and Marsh (29.6 ha) TM 163315

Most of this site, a former mine depot and remnant of grazing marsh, is currently managed for wildlife by the Essex Wildlife Trust. It comprises grazed grassland, scrub, wood, and ponds with marshy grassland in the northeast part, heavily grazed by ponies. The Depot grasslands and disturbed areas support Common Bird's-foot-trefoil (Lotus corniculatus), Black Knapweed (Centaurea nigra), Common Centaury (Centaureum erythraea), Wild Parsnip (Pastinaca sativa), Weld (Reseda luteola) and Creeping Cinquefoil (Potentilla reptans). These flower-rich areas provide valuable foraging habitat for a wide range of invertebrates. The Nationally Scarce plant Dittander (Lepidium latifolium), an Essex Red Data List species that often colonises waste ground, is well established in one area of the reserve. Hawthorn (Crataegus monogyna), Blackthorn (Prunus spinosa), Elder (Sambucus nigra) and Bramble (Rubus fruticosus agg.) are the most frequent species forming the scrub. This site is particularly important for Turtle Dove, Nightingale, Bullfinch, Linnet and Yellowhammer – all these species have seen a sharp decline in recent years in Tendring District. To the north-east is an area of old grazing marsh, providing foraging opportunities for some coastal waders and supporting a network of ditches.

This site comprises the mature parkland habitats of Michaelstowe Hall, comprising a typical mix of mature trees and tall grassland. The western section includes a stag-headed Holm Oak (Quercus ilex), offering good potential for dead wood invertebrates and possibly roosting bats, with the majority of the other parkland trees also being oaks. The grassland comprises mainly Cock's-foot grass (Dactylis glomerata), Common Bent-grass (Agrostis capillaris), Creeping Thistle (Cirsium arvense) and Stinging Nettle (Urtica dioica) and would benefit from a low-intensity grazing regime to manage the sward. The central area comprises ornamental planting around an old pond, closed canopy woodland and a small area of scattered scrub.

The trees of the eastern section comprise both native and exotic standards, including oaks, Limes (Tilia sp.), pines (Pinus sp.), Atlas Cedar (Cedrus atlantica) and other conifers. The eastern edge comprises open Sycamore (Acer pseudoplatanus) wood. The understorey and ground flora includes Holy (Ilex aquifolium), Butcher's-broom (Ruscus aculeatus), Stinking Iris (Iris foetidissima), Yorkshire-fog (Holcus lanatus), Cock's-foot Grass and Common Bent-grass. The areas of open grassland are enriched acid grassland, that could be improved for wildlife with management. The northern boundary is of geomorphological interest, comprising the original slumped cliff coastline of Parkeston, including Raycliff Wood. This cliff strip now comprises relatively modern Pedunculate Oak (Quercus robur) wood with some Field Maple (Acer campestre) and Common Hawthorn (Crataegus monogyna). Southwards from here, the land slopes down towards Ramsey Creek, passing through a series of unmanaged grassland and scrub areas. The grassland is moderately species-rich, with Red Fescue (Festuca rubra), Crested Dog's-tail (Cynosurus cristatus), Common Knapweed (Centaurea nigra), Spotted Medick (Medicago arabica), Agrimony (Agrimonia eupatoria), Marsh Foxtail (Alopecurus geniculatus), Flote-grass (Glyceria fluitans) and various Rushes (Juncus spp.) and Sedges (Carex spp.). Slow-worm and Common Lizard have been recorded from these grasslands.

The railway embankment scrub is largely Hawthorn (Crataegus monogyna), with young Pedunculate Oak, Blackthorn (Prunus spinosa) and locally dominant Broom (Cytisus scoparius). This site provides an area of accessible woodland close to the urban centres of Harwich and Dovercourt and provides an ecological extension to the scrub woodland habitats present on the disused railway line within the Ramsey Ray Site. Part of the value of this site lies in its essentially urban location and the opportunities it provides for informal countryside recreation and environmental education. This site effectively comprises the modified remnants of the upper beach grasslands that fringed Bathside Bay before it was separated from the Bay by the construction of the new A120 link to Harwich. The habitat comprises dry, herb-rich and occasionally weedy acid grassland and “brownfield” vegetation following disturbance during road construction. The flora is characterised by the presence of Yarrow (Achillea millefolium), Wild Carrot (Daucus carota), Blue Fleabane (Erigeron acer, an Essex Red Data List species), Sheep’s Fescue (Festuca ovina), Narrow-leaved Bird’s-foot-trefoil (Lotus glaber), Hawkweed Ox-tongue (Picris hieracioides, another Essex Red Data List plant), various ragworts (Senecio spp.), Hop-trefoil (Trifolium campestre), Perennial Wall-rocket (Diplotaxis tenuifolia), Black Medick (Medicago lupulina) and Common Cat’s-ear (Hypochaeris radicata).

Such flower-rich brownfield-type grasslands are recognised as important habitat for a wide range of specialist invertebrates and also reptiles, with Common Lizards known to inhabit this site and the adjacent railway embankments.

Te121 Walton Mere (27.3 ha) TM 252224

This site consists of area of saltmarsh to the northwest and a silting boating lake with developing saltmarsh flora, dominated by Common Cord Grass (Spartina anglica). Other plants present include Common Sea-lavender (Limonium vulgare), Sea Aster (Aster tripolium), Annual Sea-blite (Suaeda maritima), Greater Sea-spurrey (Spergularia media), Sea Plantain (Plantago maritima), Golden-samphire (Inula crithmoides), Shrubby Sea-blite (Suaeda vera) and Lax-flowered Sea-lavender (Limonium humile). This Site forms a natural extension to the SSSI habitats of Hamford Water, but is subjected to too much disturbance to qualify for SSSI status. Nevertheless, the Site represents a useful sheltered roosting and resting site for coastal wildfowl and waders as well as supporting the notable plants listed above.

Te123 Harwich Beach (1.0 ha) TM 262325

Although suffering from localised heavy disturbance, this stretch of foreshore has a good beach flora, a rare habitat in Essex. Characteristic species include Sea Sandwort (Honckenya peploides), Sea Holly (Eryngium maritimum), Sea Beet (Beta maritima), Sand Sedge (Carex arenaria), Marram Grass (Ammophila arenaria), Prickly Saltwort (Salsola kali), Sea Spurge (Euphorbia paralias), Sea Rocket (Cakile maritima), Lyme-grass (Leymus arenarius), Sand Couch (Elymus farctous) and Sea Couch (Elymus atherica). Sea Pea (Lathyrus japonicus) is particularly notable. More stable areas of dune grassland include Wild Carrot (Daucus carota), Autumn Hawkbit (Leontodon autumnalis), Narrow-leaved Bird's-foot-trefoil (Lotus glaber), Dittander (Lepidium latifolium) and Sea Mayweed (Tripleurospermum maritimum). Although not truly a sand dune system, this flora has very close affinities with such habitats and, as such, is felt to be part of Essex's contribution to the national Coastal Sand Dunes BAP.

LOCAL WILDLIFE SITES. TENDRING DISTRICT Te124 The Naze

Reproduced from the Ordnance Survey® mapping by permission of Ordnance Survey® on behalf of The Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office. © Crown Copyright. Licence number AL 100020327

Te124 The Naze (16.1 ha) TM 265237

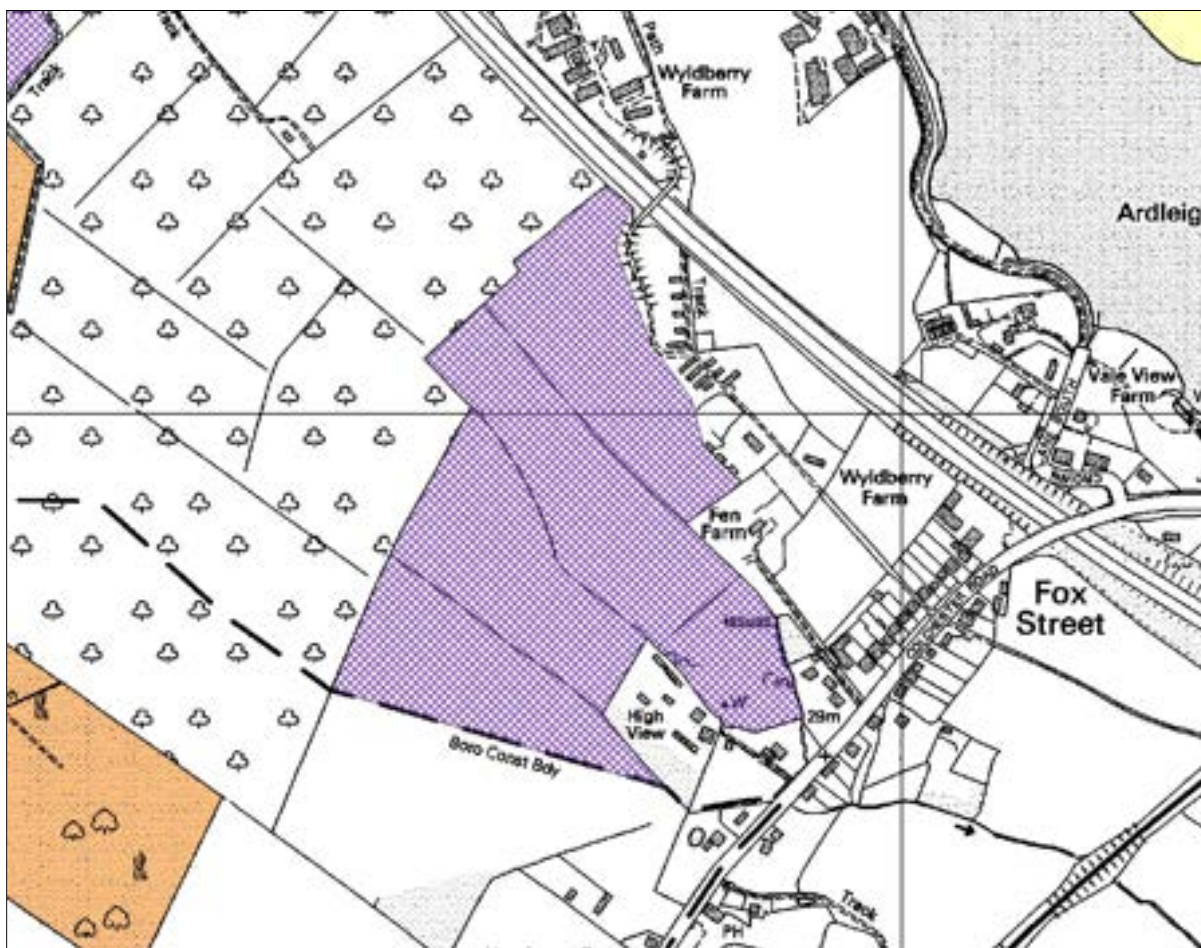

The Naze is a large public open space and is a key site for environmental education in terms of both geology and wildlife. The principal wildlife value of this Site lies in the eroding cliffs, which are afforded Geological SSSI status. Recent studies have shown the invertebrate fauna to include some Nationally Rare species, including the Red Data Book (RDB1, Endangered) spider-hunting wasp Evagetes pectinipes, previously only recorded from Kent. Other significant species include the UK BAP digger wasp Cerceris quinquefasciata (RDB3, Rare), its brood-parasite Hedychrum niemelai (RDB3, Rare) and the small black cuckoo-bee Sphecodes niger (also RDB3). Small pools in the undercliff support the Nationally Scarce (Nb) beetles Rhantus frontalis and R. suturalis, as well as Smooth Newts. The rough clifftop grassland and scattered scrub included within this Site provide foraging habitat for many of the flying insects nesting in the cliffs and also provide shelter for resident and passage migrant birds. The cliffs are also a nesting site for Sand Martins.

PTLoWS2 Fox Street Grasslands (15.5 ha) TM 026278

This is a series of moderately species-rich, damp grasslands with good hedgerows. This habitat continues to the south, within Colchester Borough.

Potential Interest: General wildlife appeal.

Action Required: Further survey work required.

PTLoWS3 Elmstead Churchyard (0.5 ha) TM 065260

Elmstead Churchyard is a small piece of old grassland. Such species-rich grassland is now a very scarce resource in the district, particularly around Elmstead.

Potential Interest: Old grassland flora and possibly invertebrate interest.

Action Required: Further survey work.

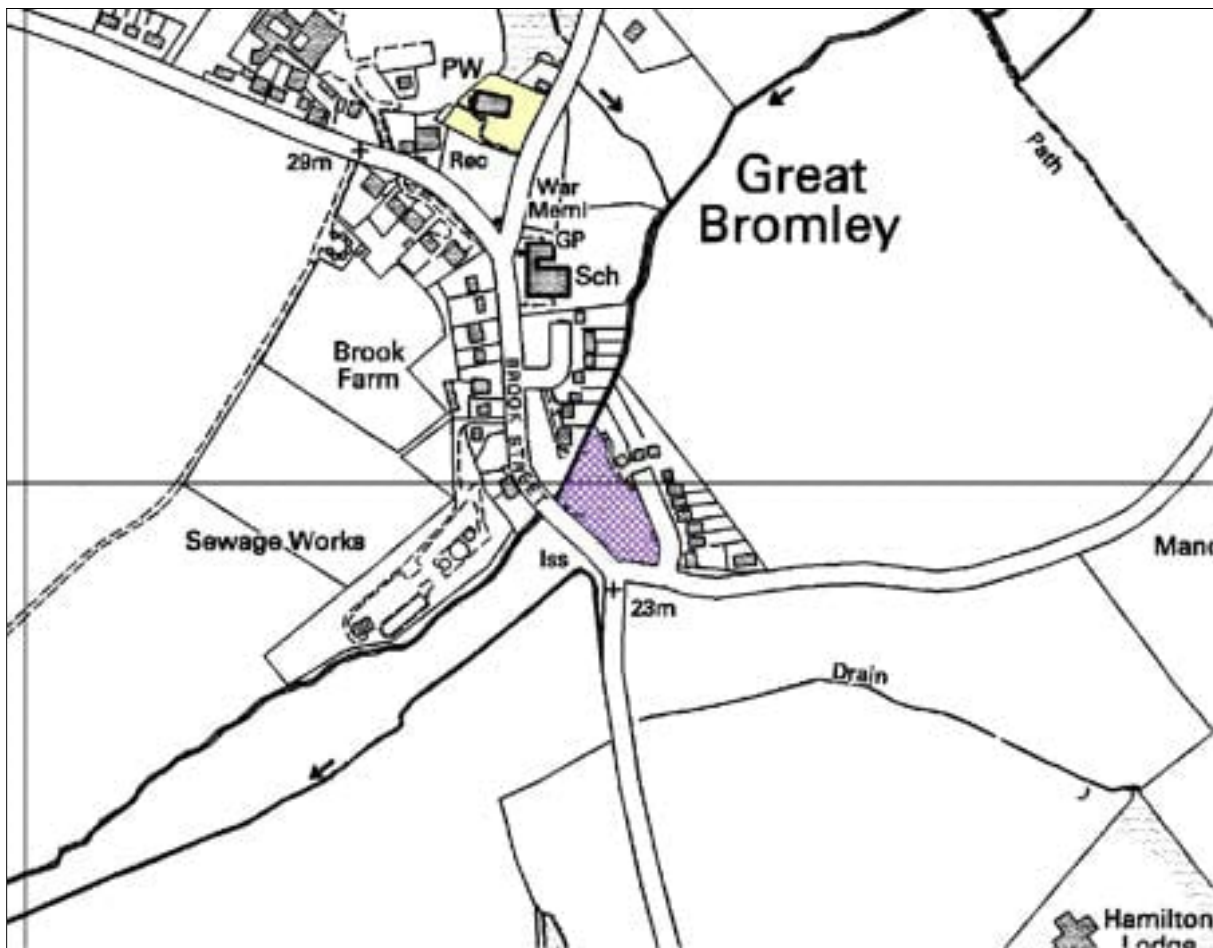

Reproduced from the Ordnance Survey® mapping by permission of Ordnance Survey® on behalf of The Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office. © Crown Copyright. Licence number AL 100020327 (EECOS) and 1000018684 (Tendring DC)

PTLoWS5 Boudge Hill Embankment (2.9 ha) TM 075256

Grassy embankment incorporating an earthbank ramp for a road that is yet to be built. In this part of the district unintensively managed grassland is a very scarce resource, with road verges probably comprising a significant proportion of that resource. The particular land form here allows for the development of a relatively wide block of flowery grassland to flourish.

Potential Interest: Flora and invertebrates.

Action Required: Further survey work.

PTLoWS6 Brook Street (0.4 ha) TM 084259

This small block of marshy ground and open woodland may never meet selection criteria but it is a useful wildlife habitat in a part of the district where Local Wildlife Sites and indeed any areas of significant wildlife interest remain very thin on the ground. Wildlife considerations should be incorporated into any future management or development of the site.

Potential Interest: General wildlife interest.

Action Required: Encourage sympathetic management; further survey work.

PTLoWS9 Gurnhams Grasslands (4.9 ha) TM 127237

This site is a small series of damp grasslands in a part of the district largely lacking in good quality grassland for wildlife.

Potential Interest: Grassland flora and invertebrates.

Action Required: Further survey work.

PTLoWS17 Brook Farm Lakes and Church (4.7 ha) TM 187273

Potential Interest: This complex of habitats, including the churchyard, could be important for amphibians, including Great Crested Newts, with areas such as the churchyard forming terrestrial habitat and over-wintering hibernacula.

Action Required: Further survey work.

PTLoWS18 Copperas Wood Farm (5.2 ha) TM 204318

Potential Interest: It has been suggested that this area of rough grassland and scattered trees might retain an important flora. The invertebrates may also repay closer inspection.

Action Required: Further survey work.

PTLoWS20 Walton Hall Marshes (48.6 ha) TM 254242

These fields are former coastal grazing marsh that underwent arable conversion but are now thought to be reverting back to grassland. The old ditches may support an interesting aquatic invertebrate fauna.

Potential Interest: High water roosting and resting grounds for coastal wildfowl and waders plus foraging grounds for some wildfowl.

Action Required: Maturation of grassland habitat, with appropriate management. Further survey work.

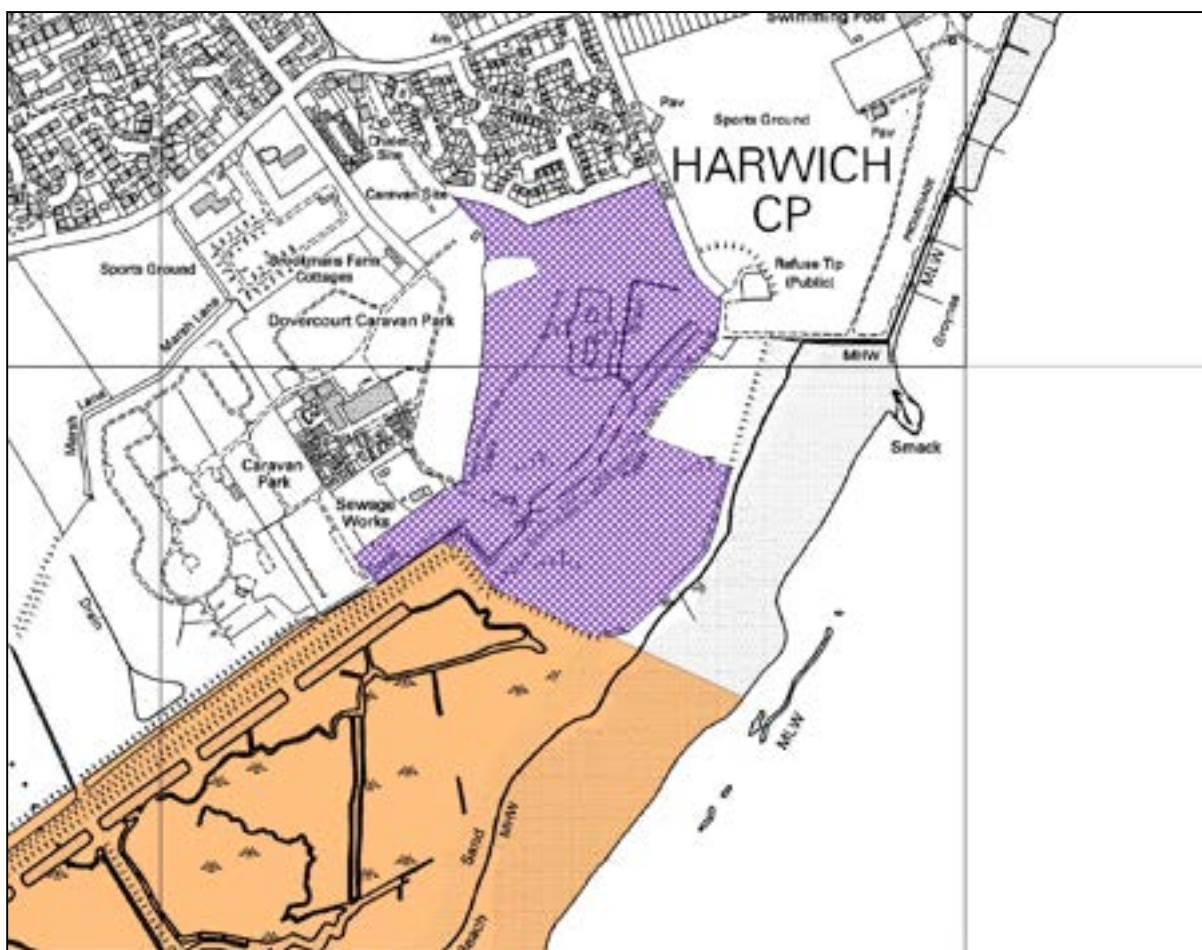

Reproduced from the Ordnance Survey® mapping by permission of Ordnance Survey® on behalf of The Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office. © Crown Copyright. Licence number AL 100020327 (EECOS) and 1000018684 (Tendring DC)

PTLoWS21 Beacon Hill (2.2 ha) TM 261317

Potential Interest: This old fort is now fenced off and difficult to access. Its prominent location on the coast makes it an obvious land-fall/resting point for passage migrant birds, as well as nesting habitat for resident species. Reptile and invertebrate populations may also be significant. Slow-worm and Common Lizard are known to have occurred here in the past, whilst a number of locally frequent but nationally scarce species of solitary bee were recorded from here in 2000, when the site was more accessible. It has been suggested that the old buildings might also harbour roosting bats.

Action Required: Further survey work.

Reproduced from the Ordnance Survey® mapping by permission of Ordnance Survey® on behalf of The Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office. © Crown Copyright. Licence number AL 100020327 (EECOS) and 1000018684 (Tendring DC)

PTLoWS23 West End Lane Grassland (14.3 ha) TM 245298

Potential Interest: This site comprises rough coastal grassland with lagoons and ditches. Part of the site is a former landfill that has now developed into a species-rich, weedy grassland. Such sites are likely to have important invertebrate populations, associated with both the grassland and aquatic habitats. Reptiles also favour such habitats, with Common Lizard, Slow-worm, Grass Snake and Adder all possible here. Water Voles have been known to occur here, but their current status is unknown.

Action Required: Further survey work, covering invertebrates, reptiles and Water Voles.

Important Invertebrate Areas in planning

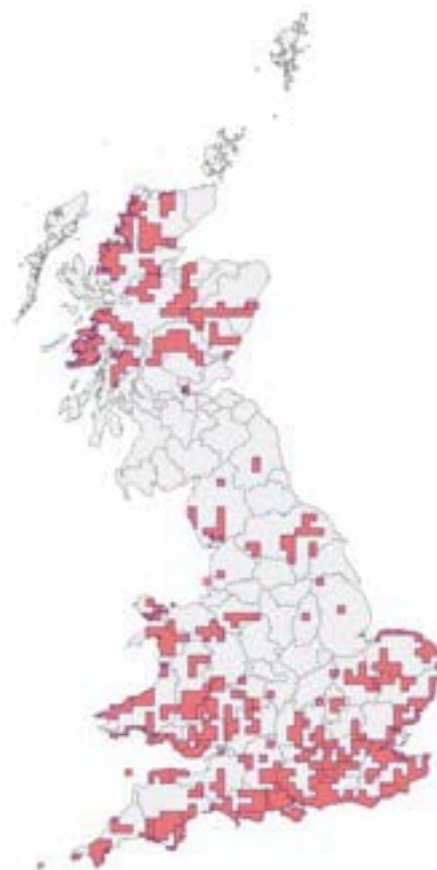

Left: Gregynog National Nature Reserve in the Montgomeryshire IIA © John Trefonen. Right: Scolt Head in the Norfolk Coast IIA © John Fielding Aerial Image

Important Invertebrate Areas (IIAs) are nationally or internationally significant places for invertebrates and their habitats. They are a vital tool to help conserve our most threatened species and assemblages of invertebrates, mapped using data from national and local recorders and developed in consultation with local experts. Although not a legal site designation, they can help to ensure that key sites for invertebrates are considered in local and national planning and land management decision making, to help restore sustainable populations of invertebrates. This can include informing site-specific planning decisions, but also strategic decisions about conservation priorities at the landscape scale.

How can IIAs help invertebrates in planning?

With thousands of species and different ecological requirements and ranges, considering invertebrates is a complex matter. IIAs take technical information and distil it into accessible and useful format to ensure that ecologists, planners, local authorities, statutory bodies, conservation organisations, land managers and other decision makers are able to better understand the importance of the landscape for invertebrates and make more informed decisions to support nature's recovery. Completed IIA maps and profiles will enable:

- Important wildlife sites to be flagged up at the earliest opportunity within planning processes, including in Environmental Impact Assessments;
- Better planning outcomes for invertebrates, by identifying when invertebrate surveys are needed to assess impacts and properly inform planning decisions;

Map of national IIA hectads (10km x 10km squares)

- Local Authorities to better recognise sites and habitats that are important for nationally rare and threatened invertebrates. This is particularly relevant for Local Authorities which don't have access to ecological expertise to support their planning teams;
- Local Environmental Records Centres to share a nationally prioritised series of maps showing key invertebrate interest, informative profiles and accompanying resources to support their data search outputs;
- Better identification of important sites for invertebrates, that can identify gaps in the national protected area network and contribute to each county's Local Wildlife Site (or equivalent) series;
- The very best sites for invertebrates to be excluded from Local Development Plans, ensuring that they are not put at risk of inappropriate land use changes or development. This will help Local Authorities to fulfil their biodiversity duty;
- Green and Blue Infrastructure plans to properly consider how they could support invertebrate populations by protecting, restoring or connecting habitat with targeted creation;
- Ecological consultants and professionals to more easily recognise key invertebrate sites, habitats and features, allowing for better impact assessments to be undertaken.

IIAs can help highlight where additional invertebrate expertise is required, but are not a replacement for expert survey and assessment. A complete network of fine-scale maps, supporting profiles and documents to help the use of IIAs to inform decision making will be produced and made available through the Buglife website. For more information and updates visit: <https://www.buglife.org.uk/our-work/important-invertebrate-areas/>

How were IIAs identified and mapped?

The network of IIAs was identified using a wealth of data - over 45 million records from 80 national expert recording schemes. Modern status reviews of invertebrate threat and rarity, alongside expert opinion, were used to identify a suite of IIA qualifying species. Nationally, a hectad (10km x 10km square) qualifies as part of an IIA if it:

- Supports a species that is Critically Endangered nationally, Endangered at the global or European level, or a range restricted endemic species. These are our rarest and most threatened species, meaning there is a special responsibility to act and conserve them.

or

- Supports a nationally important assemblage of rare or threatened species.

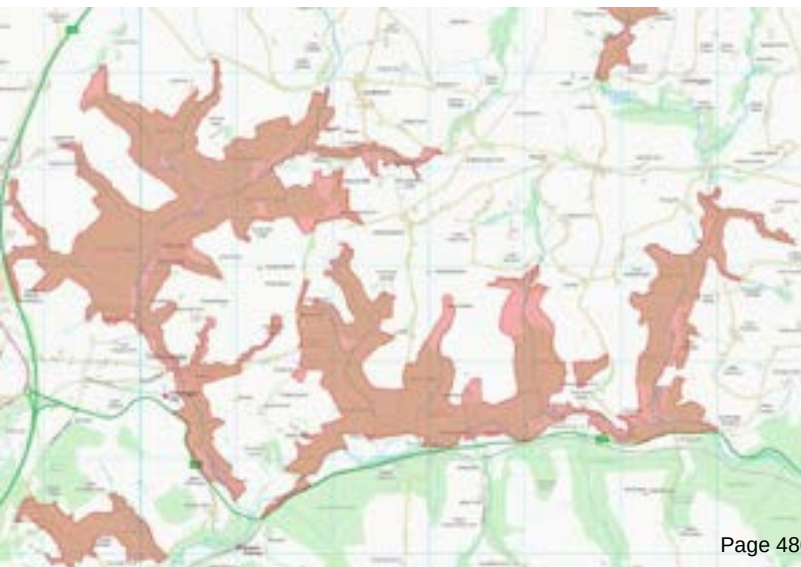

These hectads were then grouped into recognisable named IIA areas such as the New Forest, South Wales Valleys or Strathspey. Fine-scale mapping of these named IIA areas was then undertaken, to identify the networks of habitats and sites that support their key invertebrate interest. For large and complex IIAs, this used Local Environmental Records Centre data merged with the national data to create maps of qualifying species records that were scrutinised by local entomologists and naturalists.

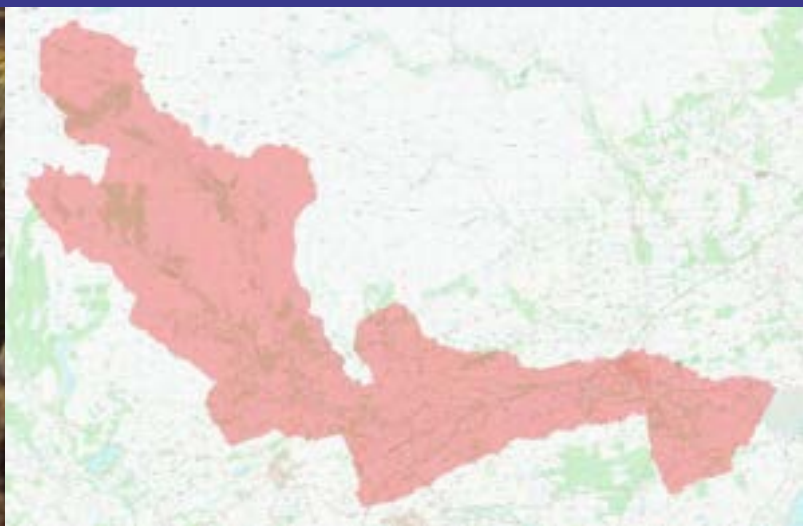

What do IIA maps and profiles show?

The IIA maps show the network of sites that support its qualifying species. This network is mapped based on the presence of verified post-1990 records of IIA qualifying species and the judgement of local experts to tease out the areas of habitat that support them.

The IIA maps do not show individual species records as the data comes from multiple sources and involve different permissions. To be best interpreted, they should be viewed alongside the relevant IIA profiles, which can be downloaded from the IIA webpage. These profiles describe the important habitats and features supporting invertebrates within each IIA. They also identify some key species to consider and assemblages of invertebrates in that area associated with specific habitat features. The information on threats and opportunities within the profile can be used to inform management decisions for habitats within the mapped IIA area.

The IIA programme is ambitious and takes time, meaning that some IIAs have yet to be fine-scale mapped, while others have been fine-scale mapped but don't yet have a supporting profile. Please bear with us while we undertake this significant task and keep checking the IIA webmap for updates to the network of fine-scale maps and accompanying profiles.

Further invertebrate considerations

- Areas outside of the fine-scale IIA map network can still be valuable for invertebrates. Habitats identified in ecological appraisals as having the potential to support important invertebrate populations should always be subject to appropriate invertebrate survey and assessment.
- All planning applications should undertake the appropriate data searches with Local Environmental Records Centres. IIA profiles can help to identify important habitat types, but it is essential that, where required, appropriate invertebrate surveys and assessments are always undertaken. These should be undertaken by a competent expert, using appropriate survey techniques and must cover the relevant survey window.

- IIA profiles identify important habitat that can inform locally relevant habitat creation, management or restoration plans so that they properly target the invertebrate assemblages of interest. Targeting habitat improvements and creation within or adjacent to fine-scale IIA areas can improve connectivity across the landscape, allowing invertebrate populations to expand and create resilient populations.

A11-1.1 Introduction

A11-1.1.1.1 This Annex supports Volume 02, Chapter 11: Onshore Archaeology and Cultural Heritage and presents a gazetteer of the known designated and non-designated heritage assets considered within the chapter.

A11-1.1.1.2 Table 11-1 presents the designated heritage assets within the 500 metres (m) Study Area, based upon the National Heritage List for England (NHLE) dataset (Historic England, 2025).

A11-1.1.1.3 Table 11-2 presents the non-designated heritage assets within English Onshore Scheme (EOS) Scoping Boundary, based upon data from the Essex Historic Environment Record (HER), as per an Essex County Council Historic Environment Event / Activity Full Report generated on 3rd June 2025 and provided to the Applicant on 29th July 2025.

1112134	TM189862 8139	Medieval to Post-Medieval	Grade II listed	Great Oakley Lodge. Circa 1600, extended in C18 and early C19. Timber-framed, part weatherboarded, part plastered, and partly of red brick in Flemish bond, roofed with handmade red clay tiles. Main range of two or three bays aligned approximately north-south. C18 cross wing to north, with internal stack at west end and external stack at east end. Lean-to extension in south-east angle, forming a catslide with the crosswing roof, partly roofed with slate. Early C19 extension to south, wholly of red brick, with an internal stack at the junction, and C20 lean-to conservatory to the south of it. C19 single-storey extension to the west, altered in C20. Mainly two storeys, south extension of two storeys with attic in gambrel roof. North elevation weatherboarded; ground floor, two early C19 sashes of sixteen lights, first floor two early C19 sashes of twelve lights, with some crown glass. Central half-glazed door with flat canopy on C19 cast iron stanchions. The east elevation has an early C19 facade of red brick. The original north-south range has jowled posts, a chamfered binding beam with chamfered joists of horizontal section, all with plain stops, a clasped purlin roof, and an original winder stair with at the top turned balusters and a moulded handrail. Single range facing south-east, with two internal stacks at rear. Full-length lean-to extension to rear, and single-storey extension beyond. One storey with attics. Four C20 casements, and two more in flat-roofed dormers. Four plain doors. The rear lean-to is cement-rendered. Included for group value.	Within Study Area
1112101	TM 21754 29085	Medieval to Post-Medieval	Grade II listed	Cherry Tree Cottage. House. C16 or earlier, altered in C20. Timber-framed, roughcast rendered, roofed with handmade red clay tiles. Two to three bays facing south-east, with axial stack at right end. C20 flat-roofed extension to right, extending to rear. One storey with attics. Two C20 casements, and one C19/20 casement in gabled dormer. C20 door at front of gabled porch. Jowled posts, heavy studding. The left bay has an original floor of longitudinal joists of horizontal section, with a trimmed stair trap in the north corner. Large peg-holes in the studded partition indicate the former presence of a fixed bench on the hall side of it. The hall has a late C16 inserted floor comprising a chamfered transverse beam with step stops, a chamfered axial beam, and plain joists of horizontal section jointed to it with soffit tenons with diminished haunches, supported at their outer ends on pegged clamps. Large wood-burning hearth, altered c.1983. The tiebeam of the partition is severed for a framed doorway, indicating that originally the hall was open from ground to roof. The present brick stack probably replaces an earlier timber-framed chimney, and perhaps a still earlier open hearth. Roof structure not accessible. Renovated c.1983 without major alteration to structure.	Within Study Area

1205216	TM 22567 30308	Post-Medieval	Grade II listed	Millbank. House. Early and late C16. Timber-framed and rendered with gabled clay plain tile roofs, hipped on north corner. Two storeys and of 'L' plan form with garage lean-to on south-west end. EXTERIOR: projecting south-east gable has imitation framing and a canted C20 oriel window on first floor over a canted flat-roofed bay window, both with casements. Plaster C20 date of 1661 over a flat-roofed porch. Main south elevation has C20 triangular plan oriel window over a C19 double-hung sash window with three vertical glazing bars. Late C16 brick stack with three diagonal shafts rises from north-west corner. This is rebuilt at head, but original base has two canted brick corner gablets at springing of shafts. A mysterious plan arrangement, seemingly the result of the incorporation of an early C16 structure into a later C16 complex. INTERIOR: the south-west-north-east block is the remains of a 'baffle entry' house of the late C16 probably of two bays plus a central stack bay. The south-west bay is now missing with evidence of serious fire damage. The frame here has close studding, evidence or diamond mullioned windows, jowled posts and arch braces to tie beams. The roof has clasped side purlins. The contemporary stack has back-to-back wood-burning fireplaces and a 'solar' fireplace over. Mantel beam on 'hall' side is covered in inscribed protective lines and the initials FR WR 1668 and separate date 1661. Remains of door opening at flank of stack and old rebated board partition between 'hall' and older wing. This is of three two-storey bays with mixture of jowled andunjowled posts and arch-braced crown post roof. Remains of diamond mullioned windows, heavy arch braces to tie beams and external wall bracing. At junction with late C16 block is wide opening with arch braces to wall plate, to achieve one large L-shaped first-floor room. Angle tie at roof plate level	Within Study Area

MEX1051085	Post-medieval finds at Bradfield Road, Wix	The evaluation did not uncover any features of archaeological interest. One of the stratigraphic layers was thought to be a diverted stream. A sherd of medieval to post-medieval pottery and post-medieval CBM were the only finds.	Medieval	TM1629628530
MEX1051108	Medieval field boundaries, furrows and the former Clay's Farm buildings on land at Green Farm, Wix	A magnetic susceptibility survey identified two probable earlier medieval field boundaries. The former site of Clay's Farm is also evident close to the southern boundary as an area of strong magnetic variation.	Medieval	TM1718228821
MEX1051352	Post-Medieval finds and field boundaries	The evaluation of the site uncovered four pits which ranged in date from the medieval to post-medieval or modern periods. By the late 19th century eight field boundary ditches had divided the site into nine fields within which were modern rubbish pits.	Medieval	TM2325730176

Annex A22-1 Indicative Receptor Identification

A22-1.1 Introduction

A22-1.1.1.1 This Annex presents indicative spatial information to support the scoping of noise and vibration effects for the English Onshore Scheme (EOS), based on currently available data. Figure A22-1 shows the parish boundaries intersected by or in proximity to the EOS Scoping Boundary, providing administrative context for the staged approach to receptor identification described in Volume 04, Chapter 22: Noise and Vibration. Figure A22-2 and Figure A22-3 show the locations of designated ecological sites that may be sensitive to noise disturbance, including Special Protection Areas (SPAs) and Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs), to illustrate their relationship with the EOS and to inform further assessment as the design and assessment progress.

A22-1.2 Notes on Human Receptor Context in Parishes

A22-1.2.1 Ardleigh

A22-1.2.1.1 Residential receptors within the Ardleigh area include properties located along Frating Lane, Mill Lane, Waterhouse Lane, Back Road, Little Bromley Road and Hungerdown Lane. Commercial and industrial receptors include premises located on Hungerdown Lane and Waterhouse Lane, together with individual businesses such as Steve Wright Engineering (vehicle repairs), Family Associates (financial services) and Ace Catering Engineers (commercial equipment repairs).

A22-1.2.2 Lawford

A22-1.2.2.1 Residential receptors in the Lawford area include homes along Bromley Road (South) and a more densely populated residential area located to the east of Lawford and north of the proposed site. Commercial receptors include a small number of businesses based along Hungerdown Lane.

A22-1.2.3 Little Bromley

A22-1.2.3.1 Residential receptors within the Little Bromley area include properties along Ardleigh Road, Bentley Road, Chequers Road, Church Road, Paynes Lane, Shop Road, Spratts Lane, Stow Farm Kennels and Hiskeys Farm. A place of worship, St Mary's Church, is also located within this parish.

A22-1.2.4 Mistley

A22-1.2.4.1 Residential receptors within the Mistley area include properties along Clacton Road, Dickley Hall Chase and Horsley Cross. Commercial receptors include Tendring Pet Cremation, SHP Food Machinery (food machinery supplier), M. Markovitz Limited (insulation materials) and Infinity Training & Assessing Ltd (training centre).

A22-1.2.5 Bradfield

A22-1.2.5.1 Residential receptors within the Bradfield area include properties along Heath Road, Steam Mill Road, Barrick Street, Ellis Road, Cansey Lane, Winney Close, Dairyhouse Lane and Straight Road, as well as Bradfield Hall. Commercial receptors include RJ Motorsport Essex Limited, OneFiveTwo Vehicle Conversions and T Wright Performance.

A22-1.2.6 Wix

A22-1.2.6.1 Residential receptors within the Wix area include properties along Bradfield Road, Spinnel's Lane, Willow Hall Lane, Spinner's Lane, Harwich Road, Colchester Road, Oakley Road and Clacton Road. Commercial receptors include the Waggon at Wix public house and Empire Tuning (Land Rover specialists). Educational receptors include Wix and Wrabness Pre-School.

A22-1.2.7 Ramsey and Parkeston

A22-1.2.7.1 Residential receptors within the Ramsey and Parkeston area include properties along Hewitt Road, Harwich Road, Tinker Street, and at South House Farm, Mill Pond Farm and Mill Pond Cottage. Commercial receptors include DKP Transport Solutions, Essex Recycling and G Crawford & Partners.

A22-1.2.8 Great Oakley

A22-1.2.8.1 Residential receptors within the Great Oakley area include Oakley Turf Farm, properties along Harwich Road and Sparrows Road, and Little Trees Residential Home.

A22-1.2.9 Little Oakley

A22-1.2.9.1 Residential receptors within the Little Oakley area include properties along Rectory Road, Harwich Road, Oak Ridge, The Homebeams, Beech Grove, Aspen Way, Clacton Road, Lodge Road, Mayes Lane and Seaview Avenue, as well as Waters View Residential Care Home and Lodge Cottage. Places of worship include St Mary's Church. Commercial receptors include Soft Floor KIDS (toy manufacturing). Educational receptors include St Michael's Church of England Primary School. Recreational receptors include Little Oakley Football Club.

A22-1.2.9.2 HarwichThe Harwich area comprises a dense mix of residential and commercial land uses. Given the scale and complexity of the urban environment, further detailed assessment will be required at later stages to identify specific receptors and understand potential noise and vibration effects.

A22-1.2.10 Great Bromley

A22-1.2.10.1 Residential receptors within the Great Bromley area include properties along Hall Road, Brook Street, Badley Hall Road, Mary Lane North and South, Parsons Hill, Camp Road, Carringtons Road, Lilley's Lane, Briar Road, Harwich Road, Chase Road East and West, Fairfield Close, Meadow Close, Back Lane East and West, Hillards Road, Park Road and Stone Road. Commercial receptors include the Great Bromley Cross public house, Greenacre Cattery, Hopewoodturning, DJC Commercials Limited and Becky's Butchers. Educational receptors include St George's Primary School.

A22-1.2.11 Little Bentley

A22-1.2.11.1 Residential receptors within the Little Bentley area include properties along Harwich Road and Little Bromley Road.

A22-1.2.12 Wrabness

A22-1.2.12.1 Residential receptors within the Wrabness area include properties along Harwich Road, Butler's Lane and at Butler's Farm.

Annex A22-2 : Underwater Sound Assessment Methodology

A22-2.1 Introduction

A22-2.1.1.1 This Annex of the Scoping Report sets out the relevant Underwater Noise (UWN) considerations for the proposed United Kingdom Marine Scheme (UKMS) and defines the proposed scope of assessment for UWN and vibration-producing activities associated with the construction, operational and maintenance (O&M) and decommissioning of the UKMS.

A22-2.1.1.2 Throughout the lifetime of the UKMS, a number of proposed activities will introduce UWN into the marine environment, these are expected to include cable laying, cable protection activities and vessel operations. It should be noted at this stage, that licensing for unexploded ordnance (UXO) works (including clearance) will be subject to separate, standalone licence applications (e.g. standard marine licence application(s) and a European Protected Species (EPS) licence). The impact pathways and associated effects in relation to UXO works (including clearance) are therefore not considered further in this EIA scoping report, or this Annex. Instead it will be included in the environmental assessments that accompany these separate, standalone licence applications.

A22-2.1.1.3 UWN has the potential to result in auditory injury, behavioural disturbance and masking in marine mammals and fish. Additional physical or physiological effects, ranging from recoverable injury to mortality, may also occur. Shellfish are considered more sensitive to particle motion rather than sound pressure; based on current understanding they are unlikely to experience adverse physiological or behavioural effects from the types of UWN expected from all phases of the UKMS.

A22-2.1.1.4 As no high-energy impulsive sources are proposed as part of the UKMS, a qualitative UWN assessment is considered appropriate to inform the Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA). High-energy impulsive activities typically require detailed quantitative modelling due to their potential to generate sound levels capable of causing significant injury or disturbance to sensitive receptors. In contrast, the activities proposed for the UKMS are characterised by low-intensity continuous or intermittent noise, with well-understood and relatively localised sound propagation ranges.

A22-2.1.1.5 These lower-intensity sound sources attenuate rapidly with distance and are not anticipated to generate sound levels capable of causing permanent or widespread disturbance to marine mammals, fish or shellfish. As such, the UWN assessment will be proportionate and qualitative, drawing on established evidence from comparable projects to outline typical impact ranges and characterise likely noise sources and their potential interactions with marine ecological receptors.

A22-2.1.1.6 A qualitative UWN assessment is therefore proposed to inform the EIA. This will describe the expected UWN sources associated with the UKMS and consider the potential for impacts on sensitive marine receptors. The assessments will be presented within the following Environmental Statement (ES) chapters:

- Volume 03, Chapter 15: Fish and Shellfish Ecology; and
- Volume 03, Chapter 16: Marine Mammal Ecology.

A22-2.2 Overview of Underwater Sound Measurement and Acoustic Metrics

A22-2.2.1.1 UWN propagates as pressure waves in water and is quantified as variations in pressures expressed on a logarithmic decibel (dB) scale. UWN levels are referenced to a pressure of 1 micropascal (μPa), with all sound levels in this report expressed in dB referenced to 1 μPa at a distance of 1 m from source. Sound impacts on marine fauna are commonly assessed using Sound Pressure Levels (SPL) and Sound Exposure Levels (SEL), with the choice of metric dependent on the sound source and exposure characteristics.

A22-2.2.1.2 SPL describes the amplitude of a sound and may be characterised using the following measures:

- SPL (root mean square (r_{ms}); SPL_{rms}): Pressure representing the average sound pressure over a specified time window. This metric is typically used for continuous or non-impulsive sounds, such as vessel noise.
- SPL (peak (p_k); SPL_{p_k}): The maximum instantaneous deviation from the mean pressure. This metric is commonly applied to impulsive sounds, such as impact piling; and
- SPL (peak-to-peak (p_k-p_k); $SPL_{p_k-p_k}$): The pressure difference between maximum compression and maximum rarefaction. This metric is also used for impulsive sound sources (such as piling) and provides an indication of the full pressure excursion of a sound wave.

A22-2.2.1.3 SEL is an energy-based metric that accounts for both sound level and exposure duration, enabling comparison of sound events of different lengths. SEL is increasingly used in assessments of effects on marine fauna, as it accounts for both exposure duration and the accumulation of repeated sound events:

- SEL (single-strike (ss); SEL_{ss}): The total acoustic energy of a single noise impulse, normalised to one second. Commonly used for geophysical surveys; and
- SEL (cumulative (cum); SEL_{cum}): The cumulative (cum) acoustic energy from multiple sound events or pulses over a defined period.

A22-2.3 Baseline Conditions

A22-2.3.1.1 Background, or “ambient,” underwater sound is produced by a combination of natural and anthropogenic sources that shape the acoustic conditions in the marine environment. Natural ambient noise arises from processes such as wind and wave action, rainfall, lightning and tectonic activity.

Biological sound sources also contribute, including sounds generated by marine mammals, fish and shrimp, for communication, navigation and foraging. Anthropogenic sound sources in the marine environment include noise from shipping and fishing vessels, and recreational boating which introduce predominantly continuous, non-impulsive noise, while some seismic surveys, UXO clearance and marine construction activities can generate impulsive sounds. Ambient noise levels vary considerably in space and time, and are influenced by seasonal weather patterns, sea state, biological activity and the intensity of vessel traffic. In 2018, the Joint Monitoring Programme for Ambient Noise in the North Sea (JOMOPANS) was commissioned, to develop a framework for evaluating the status of the North Sea. JOMOPANS data from 2019 and 2020, indicate that the highest sound levels across the North Sea occur within the low-to-mid frequency band, between 100 and 500 hertz (Hz), a range typically associated with commercial shipping and operational offshore wind infrastructure (Basan, et al., 2024).

A22-2.3.1.2 A baseline for ambient UWN will be established to inform the EIA, drawing on existing and published noise data, where available, to characterise the prevailing acoustic environment. The baseline and assessments will be captured in the Marine Mammal Ecology, and Fish and Shellfish Ecology Chapters of the ES.

A22-2.4 Potential Underwater Sound Producing Activities from the UKMS

A22-2.4.1.1 A range of potential UWN producing activities have been identified which may occur during the construction, O&M and decommissioning phases of the UKMS, these are summarised in Table A22-2-1 below.

Table A22-2-1: Potential Underwater Sound Producing Activities

Activity	Description
Construction
Cable Installation Activities	Noise from the cable laying vessel and other associated noise during the cable installation, including the placement of cable protection. These activities generate low to moderate intensity non-impulsive UWN.
Construction and Support Vessels	Continuous noise from construction vessels, cable-lay vessels and support vessels, including those operating in dynamic positioning mode. These activities produce continuous, non-impulsive UWN at relatively low levels.
Operation and Maintenance
O&M Vessels	Vessels used during operation and maintenance, such as inspection vessels, support vessels, and occasional heavy-lift or jack-up vessels (if required), produce continuous, non-impulsive UWN at relatively low levels.

Activity	Description
Cable Inspection and Repair Activities	Any inspection, repair or replacement works during operation may require the use of survey vessels, Remotely Operated Vehicles (ROVs), or cable-handling equipment. These activities generate low- to moderate-level continuous operational noise but are short-term and infrequent.
Routine Vessel Traffic	Routine transits by maintenance or inspection vessels will generate non-impulsive noise typical of standard vessel operations.
Decommissioning
Use of decommissioning vessels and rigs	UWN generated during decommissioning is expected to be relatively low and is generally continuous rather than impulsive.

A22-2.5 Method for Assessing Underwater Sound Impact Pathways in Marine Ecology Receptors

A22-2.5.1.1 The UWN assessments for the Marine Mammal Ecology Chapter and the Fish and Shellfish Ecology Chapters of the ES will adopt a qualitative, literature-based approach. The assessment will draw on relevant scientific studies and guidance, such as Southall, et al., (2019), National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) (2024), Popper et al. (2014) to describe the likely relative magnitude of impacts and potential biological effects of UWN associated with the UKMS.

A22-2.5.1.2 Potential impacts on marine mammals and fish will be assessed in relation to the potential for injurious and behavioural disturbance based on established knowledge of species sensitivity and published qualitative UWN exposure criteria. Representative noise levels for relevant activities (e.g., vessel noise, cable installation, cutting/removal of structures, and any other non-impulsive sources) will be informed by available empirical datasets from comparable offshore developments. Indicative sound sources for project activities currently anticipated to be used for the UKMS are provided in Table A22-2-2 below.

A22-2.5.2 Fish

A22-2.5.2.1 The UWN assessment will adopt a qualitative, literature-based approach to evaluate the potential impacts of UWN associated with the proposed UKMS. This approach is considered appropriate because the UKMS does not include any activities capable of generating high-energy impulsive noise sources, such as impact piling. As such, detailed UWN modelling is not required. Instead, the assessment will draw on established scientific evidence to consider the likely effects of non-impulsive, continuous noise sources on fish and shellfish.

A22-2.5.2.2 The following guidance will be followed in the UWN assessments for the Fish and Shellfish Ecology chapter of the ES:

- Sound Exposure Guidelines for Fishes and Sea Turtles (Popper A. , et al., 2014).

A22-2.5.2.3 In accordance with the Popper et al., (2014) guidance, the fish receptors of interest will be categorised into recognised hearing sensitivity groups, these are summarised in Table A22-2-3 below. This grouping supports interpretation of potential effects by considering how each sensitivity group detects sound, through sound pressure, particle motion, or both, and their relative susceptibility to UWN. Because most marine fish detect low-frequency sound below 1 kHz, activities producing noise within this range will be given particular consideration. The assessment will also account for life-stage sensitivity where relevant, including early life stages such as eggs and larvae, using the below criteria provided by Popper et al. (2014). Consideration will also be given to key sensitive periods, such as spawning or migration.

Table A22-2-3: Hearing categories of fish receptors (Popper et al., 2014)

Sensitivity Group Description

Group 1	Flatfish, sharks, skates, and rays lack swim bladders that are sensitive to particle motion and therefore only show sensitivity to a narrow band of frequencies.
Group 2	Fishes with swim bladders that do not appear to play a role in hearing. Therefore, they are only sensitive to particle motion and only show sensitivity to a narrow band of frequencies.
Group 3	Fishes with swim bladders which are involved in hearing. These species are sensitive to both particle motion and sound pressure, extending up to around 500 Hz.
Group 4	Fishes with special structures mechanically linking the swim bladder to the ear. These fishes are sensitive primarily to sound pressure, although they also detect particle motion. They have a wider frequency range, extending to several kHz and generally show higher sensitivity to sound pressure than fishes in Groups 1, 2, or 3.
Eggs and larvae	Popper et al. (2014) consider eggs and larvae separately to other receptors because of their vulnerability, reduced mobility, and small size, although few peer-reviewed papers discuss the responses of eggs and larvae to anthropogenic noise sources.

A22-2.5.2.4 The qualitative thresholds defined in the sound exposure guidelines for Shipping and Other Continuous Noises by Popper et al. (2014) will be used to support the assessment of potential physiological and behavioural effects from non-impulsive UWN on fish receptors. Such potential effects are described below (Popper & Hawkins, 2016; Popper A. , et al., 2014):

- Mortality or potential mortal injury: Exposure to sound may result in instantaneous or delayed mortality. The potential for mortality or mortal injury is likely to only occur in extreme proximity to intense sounds;
- Recoverable injury: Recoverable injury is a survivable injury with full recovery occurring after exposure, although decreased fitness during the recovery period may result in increased susceptibility to predation or disease (Popper A. , et al., 2014).
- Temporary threshold shift (TTS): TTS is a temporary reduction in hearing sensitivity caused by exposure to intense sound or sounds of long duration (e.g., tens of minutes to hours). TTS has been demonstrated in some fishes, resulting from the loss or damage of sensory hair cells of the inner ear and/or damage to auditory nerves. When experiencing TTS, fish may have decreased fitness due to a reduced ability to communicate, detect predators or prey, and/or assess their environment (Popper & Hawkins, 2019); and
- Behavioural effects: Behavioural effects as a result of construction related UWN include a wide variety of responses including startle responses (rapid reflex escape movements, known as ‘C-turns’), strong avoidance behaviour, changes in swimming or schooling behaviour, or changes of position in the water column (e.g., Hawkins & Popper (2014)). Depending on the intensity, timing and duration of exposure there is the potential for some of these responses to lead to significant effects at an individual level (e.g., reduced fitness, increased susceptibility to predation) or at a population level (e.g., interference with foraging, avoidance or delayed migration to key spawning grounds) (e.g. Popper & Hawkins (2019)).

A22-2.5.2.5 These effects are defined by the following risk ratings to estimate the potential range of impacts:

- “near” (N) (i.e. in the tens of metres);
- “intermediate” (I) (i.e. in the hundreds of metres); or
- “far” (F) (i.e. in the thousands of metres).

A22-2.5.2.6 The sound exposure guidelines for Shipping and Other Continuous Noises by Popper et al. (2014) are provided in Table A22-2-4 below.

Table A22-2-4: Popper et al. (2014) Criteria for Shipping and Other Continuous Noises

Eggs and Larvae	(N) Low (I) Low (F) Low	(N) Low (I) Low (F) Low	(N) Moderate (I) Low (F) Low	(N) Moderate (I) Moderate (F) Low

A22-2.5.2.7 For shellfish and other invertebrates, the assessment will draw on available evidence describing responses to low-frequency noise and seabed vibration. Documented behavioural and physiological responses, such as valve closure, changes in movement, or indicators of stress will be used to assess the potential for disturbance.

A22-2.5.2.8 The assessment will also draw on published scientific literature and empirical datasets to describe the likely characteristics of UWN generated by the proposed activities and the potential responses of fish and shellfish. UWN produced by activities such as vessel operations, cable installation, cutting or removal equipment, and other non-impulsive sources will be characterised using representative source levels reported in the literature and in measurements from comparable offshore projects. Anticipated SPL (a measure of the amplitude or intensity of a sound), SEL (a time-integrated measurement of the sound energy, which takes account of the level of sound as well as the duration over which the sound is present in the acoustic environment), and frequency ranges will be compared with the known hearing abilities and sensitivities of fish and shellfish likely to occur in the defined Study Area for Fish and Shellfish Ecology (Volume 03, Chapter 15: Fish and Shellfish Ecology).

A22-2.5.2.9 Potential impacts on fish and shellfish will be evaluated qualitatively by comparing expected UKMS noise characteristics with published thresholds and documented biological responses. The assessment will consider whether noise from UKMS activities could result in temporary avoidance behaviour, alterations to normal activity patterns, disturbance to sensitive life stages, or, at very close distances, potential physical injury. The emphasis will be on describing the nature and likelihood of potential responses rather than deriving numerical impact ranges.

A22-2.5.2.10 The findings will be presented in a qualitative UWN assessment in the Fish and Shellfish Chapter of the ES. The assessment will describe anticipated noise sources, outline species sensitivities, and evaluate potential pathways for disturbance or injury to fish and shellfish.

A22-2.5.3 Marine Mammals

A22-2.5.3.1 The UWN assessment for marine mammals adopts a qualitative, literature-based approach, consistent with the method applied for fish. This approach is considered proportionate and appropriate because the proposed UKMS does not involve activities capable of generating high-energy impulsive noise (e.g., impact piling or seismic sources). Consequently, detailed underwater sound modelling is not required. Instead, the assessment draws on established scientific evidence to evaluate the potential effects of non-impulsive, continuous noise sources on marine mammals, considering their known auditory sensitivities and behavioural responses.

A22-2.5.3.2 The primary metrics and criteria informing this assessment are derived from Southall et al. (2019), 'Marine mammal exposure criteria', which provides widely adopted thresholds for evaluating the effects of UWN on marine mammals. These criteria underpin the interpretation of potential environmental effects throughout the assessment.

A22-2.5.3.3 As of the time of writing, Southall et al. (2019) represents the most up-to-date and authoritative source of marine mammal exposure criteria commonly accepted for use in UK impact assessments. Although additional guidance has recently been published (i.e., NMFS (2024)), these updates have not yet been formally accepted by the relevant English regulators. Accordingly, Southall et al. (2019) remains the preferred and regulatory-aligned reference for this assessment.

A22-2.5.3.4 Southall et al. (2019) is widely recognised as the standard reference for defining marine mammal hearing groups and associated noise-exposure thresholds. The study classifies marine mammals into functional hearing groups and applies species-appropriate frequency-weighting functions to unweighted noise levels, thereby accounting for the auditory capabilities of each receptor group. The hearing groups relevant to this assessment are summarised in Table A22-2-5. Additional groups, such as sirenians and other marine carnivores in water (e.g., sea lions, walrus), are described in Southall, et al. (2019) but are not included here, as these species do not occur in the North Sea, where the UKMS is proposed.

Table A22-2-5: Marine mammal functional hearing groups (Southall et al., 2019)

Functional hearing group	Generalised hearing range	Example species
Low-frequency cetaceans (LF)	7 Hz to 35 kHz	Baleen whales (including minke whale (Balaenoptera acutorostrata))
High-frequency cetaceans (HF)	150 Hz to 160 kHz	Dolphins, toothed whales, beaked whales, bottlenose whales

Functional hearing group	Generalised hearing range	Example species
Very high-frequency cetaceans (VHF)	275 Hz to 160 kHz	Porpoises (including harbour porpoise (Phocoena phocoena))
Phocid carnivores in water (PCW)	50 Hz to 86 kHz	Seals (including grey seal (Halichoerus grypus) and harbour seal (Phoca vitulina))

A22-2.5.3.5 Table A22-2-6 presents the thresholds defined in Southall et al. (2019), which are used in this assessment to evaluate the potential physiological and behavioural effects of non-impulsive UWN on marine mammal receptors associated with activities relating to the proposed UKMS. These criteria provide a widely accepted basis for interpreting the likelihood and significance of auditory effects arising from exposure to UWN.

A22-2.5.3.6 The widely considered types of auditory injury effects are summarised below:

- TTS:
 - TTS refers to a short-term, reversible reduction in hearing sensitivity that occurs following exposure to elevated sound levels. The temporary elevation of hearing thresholds results from physiological fatigue of the auditory system and typically resolves over time once exposure stops.
 - In the context of marine mammals, Southall, et al. (2019) identify TTS onset levels for each functional hearing group, reflecting the differences in auditory sensitivities across species. TTS is not considered to represent injury but may indicate that exposure levels are high enough to cause short-term disruption, including potential impacts on communication, foraging efficiency, or predator detection.
- Permanent threshold shift (PTS):
 - PTS represents a permanent, irreversible loss of hearing sensitivity, resulting from sustained or high-intensity noise exposure that exceeds the auditory system's capacity to recover. PTS is treated as a form of auditory injury, as it reflects lasting damage.
 - According to Southall, et al. (2019), PTS onset thresholds are defined for each marine mammal hearing group and are set at higher levels than those associated with TTS onset. The likelihood of PTS from non-impulsive noise sources associated with the proposed UKMS is considered extremely low, given the absence of high-energy acoustic activities.

Table A22-2-6: Marine mammal auditory threshold criteria for non-Impulsive Noise (Southall et al., 2019)

Functional hearing group	Non-Impulsive Noise
	PTS Onset (Weighted; re 1 $\mu\text{Pa}^2\text{s}$)	TTS Onset (Weighted; re 1 $\mu\text{Pa}^2\text{s}$)
Low-frequency cetaceans (LF)	199 dB SEL _{cum}	179 dB SEL _{cum}
High-frequency cetaceans (HF)	198 dB SEL _{cum}	178 dB SEL _{cum}

Very high-frequency cetaceans (VHF)	173 dB SEL _{cum}	153 dB SEL _{cum}
Phocid carnivores in water (PCW)	201 dB SEL _{cum}	181 dB SEL _{cum}

A22-2.5.3.7 Potential effects on marine mammals will be assessed using a qualitative, evidence-led approach, drawing on comparisons between the anticipated acoustic characteristics of the UKMS and established auditory thresholds and documented behavioural responses in the scientific literature. The assessment will look at whether UWN generated by the UKMS activities has the potential to elicit behavioural disturbance, such as temporary displacement, changes in activity patterns, or sensitivity in key life-history stages. At very close ranges, the assessment will also consider the possibility of physiological effects, although such outcomes are unlikely given the nature of the anticipated noise sources.

A22-2.5.3.8 In contrast to auditory injury, there are currently no universally accepted thresholds for assessing behavioural disturbance in marine mammals within the most recent guidance documents (e.g. Southall et al. (2019); NMFS (2024)). This reflects the substantial species-specific variability in behavioural responses to sound, the influence of contextual factors (such as behavioural state, environmental conditions, and prior exposure), and the limited availability of controlled empirical studies (Gomez, et al., 2016).

A22-2.5.3.9 Given this uncertainty, behavioural effects are assessed using a qualitative, evidence-based approach. Where appropriate, the assessment may draw upon Effective Deterrent Ranges (EDRs) (JNCC, 2020; JNCC, 2025a), which provide an estimate of the distance from a given sound source at which behavioural disturbance is likely to occur in harbour porpoise. Currently, EDRs are available only for harbour porpoise; however, because this species is considered the most acoustically sensitive marine mammal in UK waters, the application of harbour porpoise EDRs offers a precautionary approach for other species.

A22-2.5.3.10 When applied, an EDR can be used to provide an indicative estimate of the number of individuals potentially disturbed, particularly where activities occur within areas of elevated marine mammal density, such as Special Areas of Conservation (SACs).

A22-2.5.3.11 The conclusions of these evaluations will be presented within the UWN assessment portion of the Marine Mammals Chapter of the ES. This will include a description of the expected UWN sources, a summary of the hearing capabilities and sensitivities of the relevant species, and a discussion of the potential impact pathways through which disturbance or injury could occur.

A22-2.5.3.12 The following guidance will be followed in the underwater sound assessments for the Marine Mammals chapter of the ES:

- Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC) guidelines for minimising the risk of injury to marine mammals from geophysical surveys (JNCC, 2017);
 - Guidance on noise management in harbour porpoise (Phocoena phocoena) SACs (JNCC, 2020); and New updated Effective Deterrent Ranges (JNCC, 2025a);

Annex A32-1 Transboundary Screening Matrix

A32-1.1 Introduction

A32-1.1.1 Background

A32-1.1.1.1 Regulation 32 of The Infrastructure Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations 2017 (the EIA Regulations) (HM Government, 2017) establishes certain duties where the Secretary of State (SoS) considers that a Nationally Significant Infrastructure Project (NSIP) may have significant effects on the environment in a European Economic Area (EEA) State¹.

A32-1.1.1.2 Regulation 32 of the EIA Regulations outlines the obligations placed on the SoS to notify and consult EEA States where needed, and within the timeframes set by the Planning Act 2008 (HM Government, 2008). These duties apply until a decision on the NSIP application is made.

A32-1.1.1.3 Where a proposed NSIP is an Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) development, the Planning Inspectorate must determine whether it is likely to have significant effects on the environment in an EEA State, as part of a Transboundary Screening process.

A32-1.1.1.4 For a proposed NSIP development needing an Environmental Statement (ES), Schedule 4 of the EIA Regulations (HM Government, 2017) requires that the description of its significant effects should include transboundary effects.

A32-1.1.1.5 During the pre-application stage of a proposed NSIP, and before a recommendation is made to the SoS, relevant Regulation 32 requirements are carried out by the Planning Inspectorate.

A32-1.1.1.6 Whilst applicants of NSIPs have no formal role under the Regulation 32 process, the Planning Inspectorate will use information provided by Tarchon Energy Limited (the Applicant) to assist in determining the potential for significant effects on the environment in EEA States.

A32-1.1.2 Transboundary Screening Matrix

A32-1.1.2.1 In line with the guidance and advice contained in the Planning Inspectorate's document Nationally Significant Infrastructure Projects: Advice on Transboundary Impacts and Process (Planning Inspectorate, 2024), information about the potential for the UK Scheme (comprising the English Onshore Scheme (EOS) and UK Marine Scheme (UKMS) as defined in Volume 01, Chapter 02: UK Project Description) to result in transboundary effects on other EEA States has been provided by the ¹ EEA States are the 27 member states of the European Union plus the three countries of the European Free Trade Association: Iceland, Liechtenstein, and Norway.

Applicant as part of its formal request for a Scoping Opinion, made under Regulation 8 of the EIA Regulations.

A32-1.1.2.2 Table A32-2 presents the findings of the Transboundary Screening exercise; these take the form of a matrix informed by the formats, templates and criteria used by the Planning Inspectorate (PINS). The findings should be read in conjunction with the proposed methodology for assessing transboundary effects described in Volume 05, Chapter 31: Cumulative and Transboundary Effects.

A32-1.1.2.3 The technical assessment scopes are presented in Volumes 02 to 04 of this EIA Scoping Report:

- Technical assessment scopes relating to the terrestrial environment are presented in Volume 02, Chapters 07 to 12;
- The technical assessment scopes relating to the marine environment are presented in Volume 03, Chapters 13 to 20; and
- Assessment scopes that relate to both the terrestrial and marine environment are presented in Volume 04, Chapters 21 to 31

A32-1.1.2.4 The Transboundary Screening Matrix (Table A32-2) takes into consideration topics where the potential for transboundary effects has been identified and identifies whether these should be Screened in or out from consideration in the EIA.

A32-1.2 Legislation, Policy and Guidance

A32-1.2.1.1 This Annex has been produced to support Volume 05, Chapter 32: Approach to Cumulative Effects. All legislation, policy and guidance relevant to this Transboundary Screening Matrix is therefore outlined in Chapter 32.

A32-1.3 English Onshore Scheme (EOS)

A32-1.3.1.1 It should be noted that all technical assessment scopes relating to the terrestrial environment have been Screened out for transboundary effects, as no effects associated with the EOS are anticipated beyond the UK's jurisdiction. Therefore, technical Chapters relevant to the EOS only (Volume 02 of the Scoping Report) are not considered further in this Transboundary Screening. Therefore, only topics relating to the UKMS (Chapters 13 to 31) are considered further.

A32-1.3.1.2 This approach reflects the nature and location of the UK Scheme, with the potential transboundary effects identified linked to activities in the marine environment taking place as part of the UKMS.

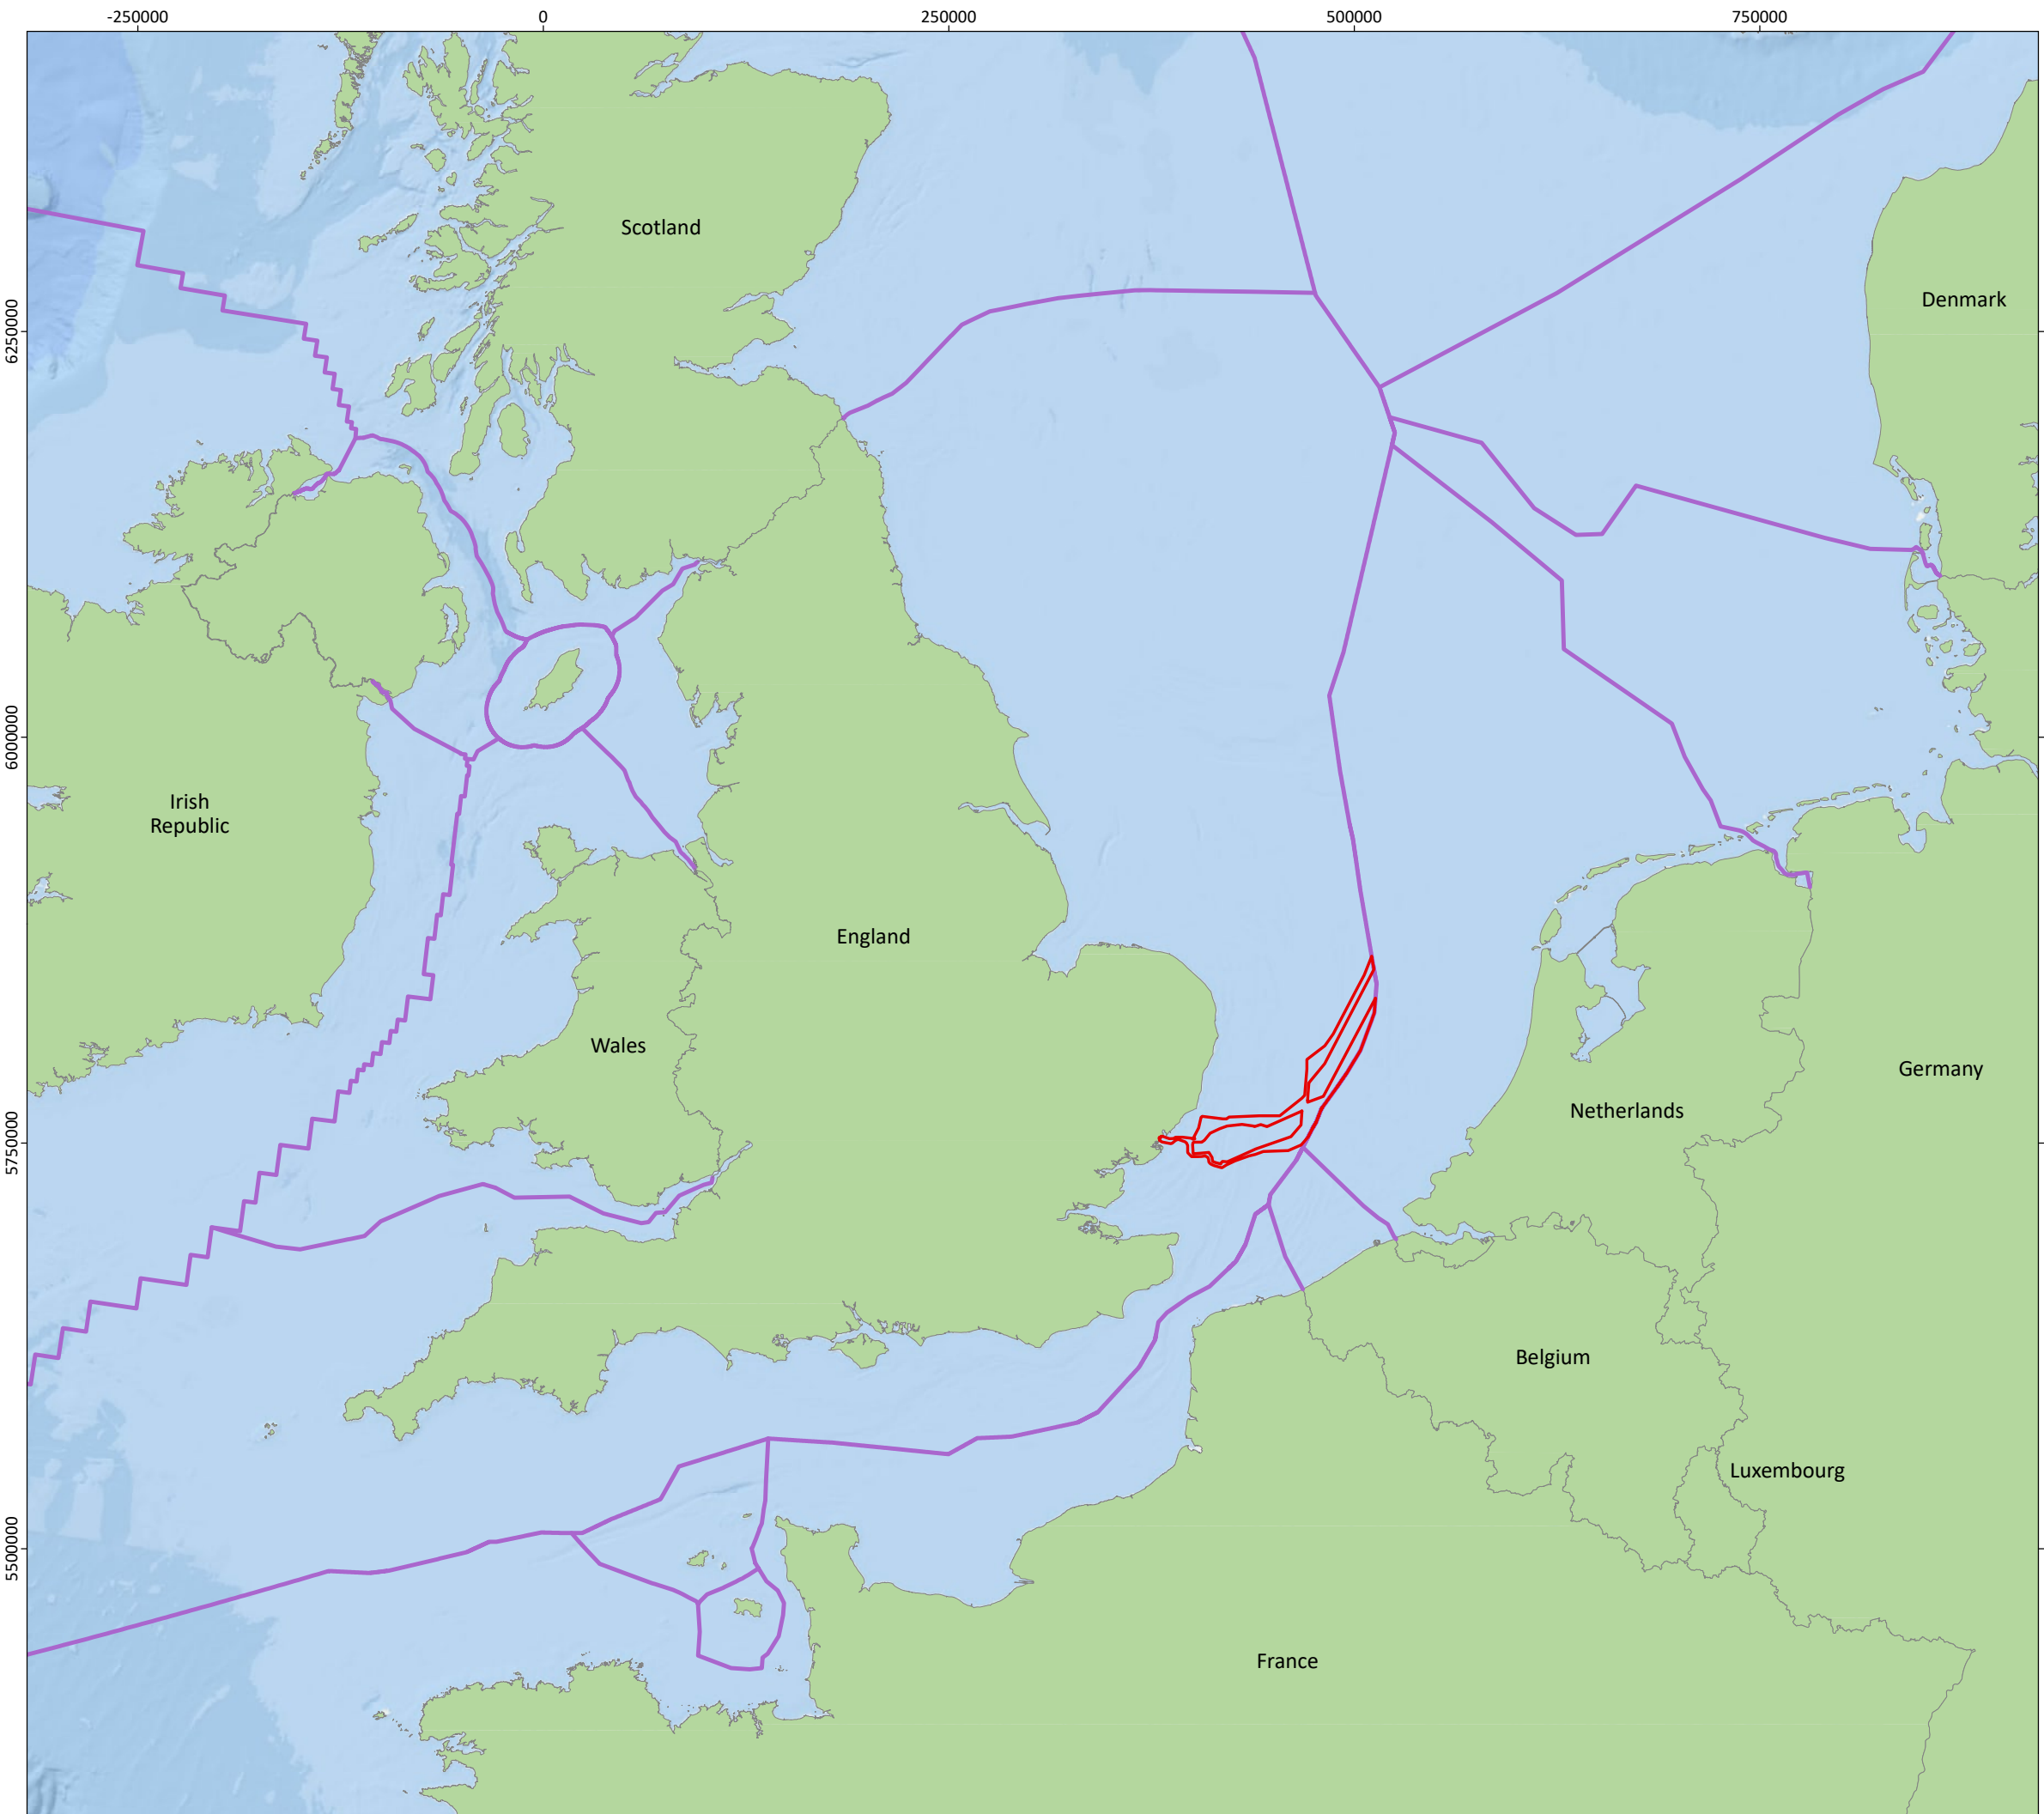

A32-1.4 United Kingdom Marine Scheme (UKMS)

A32-1.4.1.1 The UKMS is wholly located within the UK's Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ) and borders a number of neighbouring jurisdictions, the distances of which are summarised in Table A32-1 and displayed visually in Figure A32-1.

A32-1.4.2 Consultation

A32-1.4.2.1 As outlined in Volume 05, Chapter 32: Approach to Cumulative Effects, Regulation 32 of the EIA Regulations (HM Government, 2017) outlines the obligations placed on the SoS to notify and consult EEA States, and within the timeframes set by the Planning Act 2008 (HM Government, 2008), where significant transboundary effects of a project are likely.

A32-1.4.2.2 Whilst applicants for development consent have no formal role under Regulation 32 of EIA Regulations (HM Government, 2017), PINS's publication Nationally Significant Infrastructure Projects: Advice on Transboundary Impacts and Process (Planning Inspectorate, 2024) confirms that PINS will use the Applicant's information to assist in determining the potential for significant effects on the environment in EEA States. It also confirms that information regarding the potential for transboundary effects should be submitted by applicants:

- As part of any formal request for a Scoping Opinion made under Regulation 8 of the EIA Regulations (HM Government, 2017); and
- Within the suite of documents submitted as part of the application.

A32-1.4.2.3 The Applicant may also wish to consult directly with relevant or private companies (e.g. other infrastructure owners, or shipping services), or stakeholders to inform them of the transboundary effects predicted to ensure suitable mitigation can be put in place.

A32-1.4.3 UKMS Screening Matrix (per specialist topic)

A32-1.4.3.1 Table A32-2 outlines the Transboundary Screening Matrix for chapters of the Scoping Report relevant to the UKMS. This is a summary of the information provided in the Transboundary sections of the individual topic Chapters. The conclusions are detailed, along with a justification of these conclusions.

A32-1.4.3.2 The 'Study Areas' referred to in Table A32-2 relates to the Study Area defined for each respective topic Chapter under consideration.

Table A32-2: Transboundary Screening Matrix (per specialist topic)

Scoping Chapter	Screened in / out	Justification	Transboundary jurisdiction potentially affected
Volume 03, Chapter 13: Marine Physical Environment	In	Chapter 13 confirms that there is potential for transboundary effects to arise from: • Increases in suspended sediment concentrations (SSC) and resulting changes to seabed levels; • Deterioration of water quality due to the suspension of sediments and possible release of drilling fluids; and • Release of sediment bound contaminants from the disturbance of sediments. Not enough information is available to do a detailed assessment at the Scoping stage, and so these effects cannot be ruled out for the Marine Physical Environment Study Area, which overlaps with the Belgian and Netherlands EEZs.	• UK (England); • Belgium; and • Netherlands
Volume 03, Chapter 14: Benthic and Intertidal Ecology	In	Chapter 14 confirms that there is potential for transboundary effects to arise from: • Temporary increases in SSC and sediment deposition; and • Direct and indirect seabed disturbance leading to the release of sediment contaminants. Not enough information is available to do a detailed assessment at the Scoping stage, and so these effects cannot be ruled out for the Benthic and Intertidal Ecology Study Area, which overlaps with the Belgian and Netherlands EEZs.	• UK (England); • Belgium; and • Netherlands

Volume 03, Chapter 15: Fish and Shellfish Ecology	In	Chapter 15 confirms that there is potential for transboundary effects to arise from impacts associated with sediment plumes. However not enough information is available to do a detailed assessment at the Scoping stage to fully determine these effects. As a result, these effects cannot be ruled out for the Fish and Shellfish Ecology Study Area, which overlaps with the Belgian and Netherlands EEZs.	• UK (England); • Belgium; and • Netherlands
Volume 03, Chapter 16: Marine Mammal Ecology	In	Due to the highly mobile nature of marine mammal receptors (associated with feeding grounds and migratory patterns) and the large ranges of Marine Mammal Management Units, there is potential for transboundary effects on these receptors to reach a wide area. Chapter 16 confirms that whilst not enough information is available to do a detailed assessment of transboundary effects at the Scoping stage, these effects cannot be ruled out for the Marine Mammal Ecology Study Area, which overlaps with a number of EEZs.	• UK (England); • Belgium; • Netherlands; • France; • Germany; • Denmark; • Norway; • Scotland; • Ireland; • Wales;
Volume 03, Chapter 17: Commercial Fisheries	In	Chapter 17 confirms that there is potential for transboundary effects to arise, although it is not possible at this stage to confirm what these effects could be. However, as the Study Area overlaps with a number of other jurisdictions it is not possible as this stage to rule out effects from the UKMS in these EEZ areas.	• UK (England); • Belgium; • France; and • Netherlands

Volume 03, Chapter 18: Shipping and Navigation	In	Chapter 18 confirms that there is potential for transboundary effects to impact on: • Vessel movements within UK waters (of vessels based outside of the UK); and • International passages to ports outside of UK waters. Not enough information is available to do a detailed assessment at the Scoping stage, and so these effects cannot be ruled out for the Shipping and Navigation Study Area, which overlaps with the Belgian and Netherlands EEZs.	• UK (England); • Belgium; and • Netherlands
Volume 03, Chapter 19: Offshore Archaeology and Cultural Heritage	In	Chapter 19 confirms that there is potential for transboundary effects relating to: • Nationality of a shipwreck or aircraft crash site and their associated crews within the Study Area; • Potential international links regarding the build and use of the wrecked vessel or aircraft; and • Palaeogeographic receptors which have existed since before modern international boundaries and may have a level of international interest based on their relative scarcity. Not enough information is available to do a detailed assessment at the Scoping stage, and so these effects cannot be ruled out for the Offshore Archaeology Study Area, which is adjacent to the Belgian and Netherlands EEZs.	• UK (England); • Belgium; and • Netherlands

Volume 03, Chapter 20: Offshore Infrastructure and Other Users	In	Chapter 20 confirms that there is potential for transboundary effects to arise from the UKMS due to the overlap of the Study Area with the Netherlands and Belgium EEZs (and the presence of Norwegian users in these jurisdictions). The full list of Other Users that are anticipated to experience transboundary effects from the UKMS are outlined in Table 20-10 (Volume 03, Chapter 20). They include aggregate exploration zone owners, pipeline owners and Offshore Windfarm (OWF) owners. Not enough information is available to do a detailed assessment at the Scoping stage, and so these effects cannot be ruled out and remain Scoped in.	• UK (England); • Netherlands; • Belgium; and • Norway
Volume 04, Chapter 21: Landscape and Visual Impact Assessment	Out	The Study Area for Landscape and Visual Impact Assessment (LVIA) does overlap with the UKMS, meaning it has been included for consideration in this table. However, there is no overlap of the Study Area with other jurisdictions. As a result, no transboundary effects are anticipated and LVIA is Screened out of further assessment.	None
Volume 04, Chapter 22: Noise and Vibration	Out	The Study Area for Noise and Vibration does not overlap with other jurisdictions. As a result, no transboundary effects are anticipated and Noise and Vibration is Screened out of further assessment. It should be noted that Unexploded Ordnance (UXO) is not being considered with in this EIA. Instead UXO will be consented under a separate marine licence with the environmental	None

		assessment of potential effects from UXO work being presented in the accompanying licence application documents. Underwater noise associated with UXO clearance is not considered further in this EIA.
Volume 04, Chapter 23: Ornithology	Out (onshore Ornithology)	The onshore Ornithology Study Area does not overlap with any jurisdictions other than the UK meaning that transboundary effects for onshore Ornithology are Screened out.	None
	In (offshore Ornithology)	The offshore Ornithology Study Area intersects with the Belgian and Netherlands jurisdictions, meaning it is possible that the following impact pathways could cross into these jurisdictions for offshore Ornithology: • Temporary disturbance and displacement (above water noise and physical presence); and • Indirect effects on prey and habitat. Offshore Ornithology is therefore Screened in for transboundary effects.	• UK (England); • Netherlands; and • Belgium.
Volume 04, Chapter 24: Socio-economics and Land Use	Out	The Study Area for Socio-economics and Land Use does not overlap with other jurisdictions. As a result, no transboundary effects are anticipated and Socio-economics and Land Use is Screened out of further assessment.	None
Volume 04, Chapter 25: Health and Wellbeing	Out	Impacts on Health and Wellbeing will only occur where there is a direct disturbance to communities and as such, will not be experienced beyond the	None

		UK's jurisdiction. As a result, Health and Wellbeing is Screened out of further assessment.
Volume 04, Chapter 26: Materials and Waste	Out	It is assumed that products and materials used for the UK Scheme are being developed in a manufacturing environment with their own waste management plans, facilities, and supply chain, which are potentially in different regions of the UK or world. Such matters cannot be accurately predicted and assessed as they relate to procurement decisions that cannot be assured. Transboundary effects related to indirect environmental impacts at off-site waste management facilities are assumed to be assessed (and where necessary mitigated) under the planning and permitting regime for those sites and thus do not normally require assessment as part of an EIA for a development that uses such facilities waste management. As a result, transboundary effects are Screened out for Waste and Materials.	None
Volume 04, Chapter 27: Tourism and Recreation	Out	Despite the Tourism and Recreation Scoping Study Area intersecting with the UK, Belgium and Netherlands EEZs, Chapter 27 confirms that there no transboundary effects are anticipated on Tourism and Recreation receptors. This is due to the fact that any effects arising from the installation of subsea cables would be small in scale, short lived, and confined to a narrow working corridor. This suggests that the UKMS would not result in any lasting changes to offshore tourism and	None

		recreation conditions. As a result, Tourism and Recreation is Screened out for transboundary effects.
Volume 04, Chapter 28: Air Quality	Out	As outlined in Chapter 28, there is potential for vessel emissions associated with the UKMS to transcend international boundaries (into nearby jurisdictions including the Netherlands and Belgium). However, these emissions will be highly intermittent, limited in duration and temporary. As such, transboundary air quality effects resulting from the UKMS are Screened out of further assessment.	None
Volume 04, Chapter 29: Carbon and Climate Change	In	As outlined in Chapter 29, Greenhouse Gas (GHG) emissions and Climate Change effects are global and inherently transboundary in nature. As a result, transboundary effects from the UKMS associated with Carbon and Climate Change cannot be ruled out and are Screened in for further assessment. For now, the neighbouring jurisdictions of Belgium and the Netherlands are Screened in for assessment, but this may extend or reduce as the design develops.	• UK (England); • Netherlands; and • Belgium.
Volume 04, Chapter 30: Risk of Major Accidents and Disasters	In	Chapter 30 confirms that only Scoped in effect for the Risk of Major Accidents and Disasters is 'malicious attacks (sabotage by external parties)'. This Transboundary Screening Matrix for the UK Scheme considers potential effects to other jurisdictions as a result of activities happening within the UK Scheme Scoping Boundary. Should	• UK (England); and • Germany the UK Scheme experience malicious attacks in UK waters, the German jurisdiction could be affected by direct power losses. It is not anticipated that effects would arise for the Netherlands jurisdiction. As a result, this topic remains Screened in for transboundary effects.

Volume 04, Chapter 31: Other Environmental Topics	Out	Chapter 30 is split between three environmental sub-topics including: • Telecommunications, Radio and Television Reception, and Onshore Utilities; • Heat and Electromagnetic Fields; and • Aviation and Radar. All of these topics have been Scoped out from further assessment in the EIA, and it is confirmed in each that no transboundary effects are anticipated. Other Environmental Topics are therefore Screened out for transboundary effects.	None

A32-1.4.4 PINS Screening Process

A32-1.4.4.1 The Applicant is aware that as part of the DCO process, The Planning Inspectorate (PINS) will conduct its own Transboundary Screening for the UK Scheme under Regulation 32. A Screening template is available on the PINS website (Planning Inspectorate, 2024) which outlines the criteria that PINS will review the UK Scheme against. This template has been copied and presented below in Table A32-3 to signpost PINS to the required information for ease of PINS's review.

Table A32-3: PINS Transboundary Screening Information

PINS Criteria and Relevant Considerations	Relevant UK Scheme Information
Characteristics of the development: • Size of the development • Use of natural resources • Production of waste • Pollution and nuisances • Risk of accidents • Use of technologies	A detailed description of the UK Scheme is provided within Volume 01, Chapter 02: UK Project Description. This Transboundary Screening matrix considers potential transboundary effects of the UK Scheme on other EEA states. The UK Scheme consists of the: • English Onshore Scheme (EOS); and • UK Marine Scheme (UKMS). The EOS is scoped out from transboundary effects (based on the Scoping results from each of the relevant topic Chapter assessments presented in Volume 02 of the Scoping Report). Therefore, this Transboundary Screening Matrix considers the UKMS only. The only exceptions to this are consideration of Climate Change and Major Accidents and Disasters which are project wide (EOS and UKMS) assessments. • Size of the development: – Detail on the size of the development is provided in Volume 01, Chapter 02: UK Project Description. • Use of natural resources: – Details on the use of natural resources is provided in each of the specialist Chapters of the Scoping Report (where relevant), which includes Volume 02 (Onshore Environment), Volume 03 (Offshore Environment), and Volume 04 (UK Scheme Wide). • Productions of waste: – Details on the production of waste are provided in Volume 04, Chapter 26: Materials and Waste. • Pollution and nuisances:

PINS Criteria and Relevant Considerations

Relevant UK Scheme Information

- Details on pollution and nuisances are provided in each of the specialist Chapters of the Scoping Report (where relevant), which includes Volume 02 (Onshore Environment), Volume 03 (Offshore Environment), and Volume 04 (UK Scheme Wide).

- Risk of accidents:

- Details on the risk of accidents is provided in Volume 04, Chapter 30: Risk of Major Accidents and Disasters.

- Use of technologies:

- Details on the use of technologies is provided (where relevant) in Volume 01, Chapter 02: UK Project Description.

Location of development and geographical area:

- What is the existing use?
- What is the distance to another EEA state? (Name EEA state)
- What is the extent of the area of a likely impact under the jurisdiction of another EEA state?

- Existing use:

- The following text describes the geographical location and associated existing use of the different elements of the UK Scheme:
 - The EOS is located within the administrative boundaries of Tendring District Council and Essex County Council. The settlements of Little Bromley, Horsleycross Street, Wix, Great Oakley, Little Oakley, Wix and Dovercourt are located within, or partially within the EOS Scoping Boundary. The EOS Scoping Boundary is shown in Volume 01, Chapter 01: Introduction, Figure 1-4.
 - The UKMS comprises the proposed Subsea HVDC Cables in UK waters - UK territorial waters (up to 12 NM from shore) and the UK exclusive economic zone (EEZ) (12 NM to a median point where it meets the Dutch EEZ)). The UKMS will be installed within the UKMS Scoping Boundary as shown in Volume 01, Chapter 01: Introduction, Figure 1-5.

- Distance to EEA States:

- This information is provided in Table A32-1 of this Annex.

Extent of area:

- A description of the extent of the area of likely impacts that are under the jurisdictions of other EEA states is provided in Table A32-2 of this Annex and is presented per specialist Chapter of the Scoping Report.

PINS Criteria and Relevant Considerations

Relevant UK Scheme Information

Environmental importance:

- Are particular environmental values (e.g. protected areas – name them) likely to be affected?
- Capacity of the natural environment.
- Wetlands, coastal zones, mountain and forest areas, nature reserves and parks, sites within the National Site Network (Special Areas of Conservation (SAC) and Special Protection Areas (SPA)), Ramsar sites, Marine Conservation Zones (MCZ), areas where environmental quality standards already exceeded, densely populated areas, landscapes of historical, cultural or archaeological significance.

- All information relating to the PINS criteria for 'Environmental Importance' is presented in the individual specialist topic chapters of the Scoping Report. These include:
 - Volume 02 (Onshore Environment): Chapters 07 – 12;
 - Volume 03 (Offshore Environment): Chapters 13 – 20; and
 - Volume 04 (UK Scheme Wide): Chapters 21 – 31.

Potential impacts and carrier:

- By what means could impacts be spread (i.e. what pathways)?

Potential transboundary impact pathways have been identified for the following environmental topics (detail on this is provided in Table A32-2 of this Annex):

- Marine Physical Environment;
- Benthic and Intertidal Ecology;
- Fish and Shellfish Ecology;
- Marine Mammal Ecology ;
- Commercial Fisheries;

PINS Criteria and Relevant Considerations

Relevant UK Scheme Information

- Shipping and Navigation;
- Offshore Archaeology and Cultural Heritage;
- Offshore Infrastructure and Other Sea Users;
- Carbon and Climate Change; and
- Risk of Major Accidents and Disasters.

Further detail on the specific pathways is provided in the 'Cumulative and Transboundary Effects' section of each individual Chapter.

Extent:

- What is the likely extent of the impact (geographical area and size of the affected population)?

The extent of potential transboundary impacts has not been determined at this stage and would be subject to assessment as part of the EIA. However, it is anticipated that most impacts would be limited in spatial extent in proximity to the EEZ boundary, with the possible exception of Climate Change.

Magnitude:

- What will the likely magnitude of the change in relevant variables be relative to the status quo, taking into account the sensitivity of the variable?

The magnitude of potential transboundary impacts has not been evaluated in detail at this stage and will be subject to further assessment as part of the EIA.

Probability:

- What is the degree of probability of the impact?
- Is the impact likely to occur as a consequence of normal conditions or exceptional situations such as accidents?

The probability of potential transboundary impacts occurring has not been evaluated at this stage. This will be subject to further assessment as part of the EIA.

Duration:

Limited information is currently available on the duration of potential transboundary impacts. This will be subject to further assessment as part of the EIA.

PINS Criteria and Relevant Considerations

Relevant UK Scheme Information

- Is the impact likely to be temporary, short-term or long-term?
- Is the impact likely to relate to the construction, operation or decommissioning phase of the activity?

Frequency:

- What is likely to be the temporal pattern of the impact?

The frequency of potential transboundary impacts has not been evaluated at this stage. This will be subject to further assessment as part of the EIA.

Reversibility:

- Is the impact likely to be reversible or irreversible?

The reversibility of potential transboundary impacts has not been evaluated at this stage, although some effects are expected to be temporary – e.g. changes in water quality associated with an increase in suspended sediments; and disruption of navigation routes during subsea cable installation.

Cumulative impacts:

- Are other major developments close by?

There are a number of other proposed developments within the EOS and UKMS Scoping Boundaries and cumulative effects are expected to arise. Currently at this Scoping stage of the EIA the full search for existing and planned major developments has not been finalised. However, the methodology for approaching this, and a number of key nearby developments are detailed in Volume 05, Chapter 32: Approach to Cumulative Effects.
