When it comes to planning for the future your plan for a tunnel under Stonehenge should be near the bottom of your agenda. We have been almost bankrupted by corona virus. Already we have a white elephant in the High Speed Rail which is eating up billions of pounds, wrecking many people's lives in it path and will be obsolete by the time it is finished, if it ever is completed. The energy bills which affects the the cost of food, travel, and many other aspects of our lives are increasing to unbelievable levels. We may be on the edge of a Third World War and you are proposing to dig a tunnel under one of our most iconic sights in our country which has stood at this site for around Four Thousand years. Have we no-one capable of coming up with a simpler and less costly alternative to this ridiculous plan. It seems everything that this government can come up with has to massage the ego of the proposer and fill the pockets of the construction companies.

Please reconsider this proposed plan.
