Sirs,

I read the comments for reconsidering the despoiling of the landscape and sowing the seeds of potential damage to one of OUR heritage sites.

It seems inconceivable to me that this scheme ever got past the very first mootings of it. Have Highways got no understanding of our cultural heritage.

Stonehenge is a miracle of man's endeavours to create, against all the odds, something of beauty and symbolism which has stood for long in England's formative history.

Without the tangible evidence of our history we diminish and potentially erase our history. I realise, but have trouble accepting, that our education and cultural values have declined at pace in the last eighty years but there is still time to reverse the A303 decision.

For the triumph of vandalism it just takes good men to do nothing.

Please stop this scheme.

Alan Latham
