Consultation response:

There is no need for the airfield to become an airport. The recent official report is clear in reaching this conclusion and totally in line with common sense and the realities of such a peripheral site.

Not only is there no need for it, it would devastate quality of life for thousands of people should it proceed, through noise and air pollution. It would work against all climate change targets.

Although eventual failure would be inevitable, in the meantime this saga is putting a brake on investment in Ramsgate. The town should be developing as an architectural tourist town with a green sea port.

Please turn down the DCO application and put an end to this harmful proposal which never had the needs of Ramsgate or humanity at heart.
