Dear Sir/Madam,

Gatwick doesn't need to expand, it's big enough!

The population that lives around the airport are constantly being disturbed by low noisy polluting aircraft day and night and into the small hours of the morning. We are all suffering with the noise disturbance and the pollution from the airport.

The south east is busy enough, it's hugely over populated, the small and old towns and villages aren't coping with the amount of traffic and people moving to the area and the constant building of new dwellings.

Expanding Gatwick would mean more traffic, more people, and more homes, and more congestion, which is totally selfish and unfair to those of us who have lived in the area all our lives.

It is an area of full employment.

A new airport should be built in an area of unemployment.

Yours sincerely,

Mrs Watson
