I do not support Gatwick expansion.

I did fly from Gatwick when it was modernized in the late 1950s and if it was still this size the surrounding areas in Sussex would be a far nicer place to live.

I lived in Crowborough Sussex for many years and slowly the noise became worse to a point that in the end this forced me to move .

I now live in Hooe Sussex . When I first moved here the noise was acceptable on the edge of the hold area. This now has become worse causing me to think about moving again.

Expanding Gatwick will just make things worse noise wise and this in an area many miles from the Airport itself. Nearer will become a real burden for the people that live there especially if they cannot move for some reason probably affecting many peoples health both physically and mentally.

The above is without the traffic density already well above where it should be due to extra housing and business sites without any improvements .

Extra pollution obviously also comes into the argument , something I am not an expert on.
